House Clings To 5-5 Plan; Cuts Senate Veterans' Aid

All Predictions Are Lost in Surprise Refusal of Liberal Move.

Conference Today May Settle Fight

Upper Chamber to Yield on Pay Vote, Opinion Indicates.

The fate of Government pay restoration and increased veterans' allowances will be determined today in the Senate as a result of the House yesterday insisting on its 5-and-5 plan for Government employes, and $83,000,000 more for veterans of the World War, the Spanish-American War, and their dependents.

Upsetting predictions of House leaders, including Speaker Rainey himself, the House voted to insist on its two amendments and against concurring in the more liberal Senate amendments providing full pay restoration and $118,000,000 for veterans.

If the Senate accepts the House amendments, as several House leaders were inclined to believe last night, the bill will go immediately to the White House—with the outcome uncertain.

Should the Senate insist on its amendments, however, the bill will return to conference, with all indications that it will be deadlocked indefinitely.

Byrnes to Call It Up Today.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Senate conferees, said he would call the amendments up today as a special order of business and move that the Senate further insist on its amendments.

Opinion prevailed on the Senate side that the Senate would be willing to accept the House compromise pay plan, but that the veterans' bloc would insist on further liberalization of allowances above those provided in the House Taber amendment.

In order to have ready a further compromise program, either for presentation on the floor or in conference, should the Byrnes motion carry, Senator Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon, sponsor of the Senate veterans' amendment, and others supporting his position conferred last night.

While veterans' spokesmen were more inclined than previously to give in somewhat in the hope of passing a bill that might not be vetoed, they still felt that the House amendment was not liberal enough.

Reece Guilty In Bond Theft

Tennessean Faces 10 Years for Taking $100,000 in State Issues.

Nashville, Tenn., March 22 (AP).—Former Insurance Commissioner Joseph I. Reece, accused of stealing $100,000 in bonds held by the State, was found guilty by a criminal court jury today, which set the penalty at not more than ten years in the penitentiary.

The 50-year-old official in the preceding State administration was indicted on a charge of grand larceny in connection with disappearance of securities in custody of the Blue Sky division of the insurance department by the Fidelity Investment Association of Wheeling, W. Va.

Prosecutor R. M. Atkinson has reported recovery of $91,500 in cash and other securities.

Asked for a statement, Reece said, "None at all."

Jeff McCarn, of defense counsel, said a new trial would be sought and the court allowed 38 days in which to prepare the motion.

Reece was released under $20,000 bond.

Ill Husband Beats Wife To Death, HangsHimself

Dry Ridge, Ky., March 22 (AP).—Apparently driven by ill health that has afflicted him for years, John N. Brewer, 68, well-to-do farmer, today beat his wife, 65, to death and then hanged himself in his barn.

Balzar's Widow Sent Roosevelts' Sympathy

Carson City, Nev., March 22 (AP). Mrs. Frederick B. Balzar, widow of Nevada's Governor, today received a telegram expressing the sympathy of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Funeral services for the Governor, who died Wednesday, will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday in the State Building at Reno.

Two Bremer CaptorsNamed; Hunt Is Started

U. S. Identifies Former Convicts as St. Paul Kidnapers.

(Associated Press.)

Government agents ranged the country last night for two Western outlaws named by the Department of Justice as the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, of St. Paul.

The men wanted are Arthur R. Barker, 34, and Alvin Karpis, 25, described as joint leaders of a notorious gang which has operated extensively through the Middle West.

Justice officials said the two men were linked with the Bremer abduction several weeks ago and that the identity of members of their mob was known. Bremer was kidnaped January 17 and released February 7 after payment of $200,000 ransom.

Both Barker and Karpis are out on parole from the State Penitentiary at McAlester, Okla. Barker served ten years of a life sentence for murder before getting his freedom, and Karpis was paroled after serving part of a four-year sentence for burglary. The men have long strings of aliases, Justice officials said.

Adolph and Otto Bremer, father and uncle of the victim, called at the Department of Justice this week and conferred with Attorney General Cummings.

Cuba Treasury Head To Fly Here for Loan

Havana, March 22 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Joaquin Martinez Saenz said today he was "optimistic" concerning a United States loan he has been negotiating for the Cuban Government in Washington, and announced he was returning to the Capital by air Saturday.

The cabine' discussed loan prospects and retired without making an announcement.

Police Halt Mail Parade.

Philippine, Navy Bills Pass Senate

Upper House Concurs in Adoption of 2 Measures.

Measures to Influence U. S. Relations in Far East.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

The Senate yesterday completed Congressional action on two pieces of major legislation which in future years may vastly influence relations of the United States with the Far East.

Two hours after the House took similar action, the Senate approved the conference report on the Vinson naval construction bill, which calls for a full treaty strength Navy by 1939, at a cost estimated between $450,000,000 and $750,000,000.

Later in the day the Senate, by a vote of 68 to 8, adopted without amendment the Tydings McDuffie Philippine independence bill, which provides for the surrender of American military bases in the Pacific islands when their sovereignty becomes complete. Retention of naval bases is made subject to future negotiation.

Both the Philippine and naval construction measures will be sent to President Roosevelt for his signature as soon as they are signed by Speaker Henry T. Rainey and Vice President John N Garner, a formality which will take place today. The two bills were backed by the Administration.

1,140 Airplanes.

Under the program authorized by the naval construction bill, the United States has indicated its intention of constructing during the next five years 102 war vessels of various types in the auxiliary category and 1,140 airplanes.

Such a program, it has been estimated by naval officers, is necessary to bring the United States up to the limits allowed it in the Washington and London naval treaties. In another year, however, these treaties are scheduled to come up for revision and that fact may have something to do with this country's anxiety to build up to treaty strength.

But unrest in the Far East and the danger of war with Japan contributed to the inspiration which moved Congress. The Japanese likewise are building up to their treaty limits and it has been indicated in Tokyo that at the 1935 naval conference Japan will demand parity with the United States and Great Britain.

Consideration of the conference report on the naval bill was sandwiched into the debate on the Philippine measure. The only debate comprised protests against the change made by the conferees in the Bone amendment which provided that 25 per cent of the airplanes authorized should be constructed in Government plants.

The conferees rewrote this section to provide that not less than 10 per cent of the airplane program shall be constructed in Government factories, provided such facilities were available. The conditions attached to the requirement constituted "weasel words which nullified the provision and it might as well have been left out," Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington asserted in a speech assailing air-

Hair Bobbed, Mate Scalds, Beats Wife

Woman, Left in Woods, Saved by Farmer.

Danville, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—When W. B. Ledford returned home after an absence of five months today, he discovered something changed about his wife's appearance. She had bobbed her hair.

Enraged, police say, Ledford scalded Mrs. Ledford's face and neck with steaming coffee. He then beat her with a revolver, took her in his automobile to a lonely woods, 15 miles from here, and abandoned her.

Mrs. Ledford staggered to a colored tenant-farmer's cabin. The man walked 3 miles to summon aid. Police had not found Ledford tonight.

Ship Cook, 70, With Jack Knife Scalpel, Was Aged's 'Surgeon'

New York, March 22 (AP).—Investigation into treatment of aged and sick at the City Home for Dependents on Welfare Island closed today with the story of a 70-year-old inmate, who told of a "clinic" where he treated ailing persons for two years with only an old jackknife.

The witness, Charles Johnson, a former ship's cook, pulled the knife from his pocket as he testified.

"You used that knife on patients?" he was asked.

"Yep," he replied, displaying the 2-inch, razor-sharp blade. "I learned how to cut away the flesh at sea.

"I was the best man they had on ulcers down there," he informed Commissioner of Accounts Paul Blanshard, who is directing the investigation.

Blanshard said he would turn over the evidence he has obtained to District Attorney William C. Dodge for criminal prosecution.

"This is the answer to politics," he said.

Gross mismanagement, cruel and inhuman treatment of the inmates, political chicanery, thievery, graft and neglect have been charged during the four days' hearing.

Superintendent Louis J. McNally is missing. During the eight years he was in charge, he accumulated $84,686 in bank deposits and mortgages, on a total salary of $28,000.

Johnson said the clinic was in an abandoned morgue down on the waterfront. There he and "Pete," an assistant, who, he said, constantly drank their supply of alcohol, welcomed their pitiable patients. For his doctoring, Johnson said, he was paid four plugs of tobacco a week.

A physician, testifying on the clinic, said "the danger of contagion was terrible."

Dewey Pearls Paste; $1,000 Sale Ordered

Famous Choker of Hero's Widow Was Reputed to Be Worth $15,000.

Supposedly worth $15,000, the famous 12-strand pearl and diamond choker of Mrs. Mildred McLean Dewey, widow of the noted admiral, was ordered sold yesterday by District Supreme Court for $1,000 with the revelation that the pearls had been judged spurious and the diamonds of little value.

The knowledge set Washington society gossiping because it was believed that Mrs. Dewey thought the jewels genuine. Her friends—Mrs. Dewey died on February 21, 1931—frankly wondered how pearls both they and Mrs. Dewey had regarded as real could have disappeared, leaving only paste gems in their place.

In speaking of their assurance that Mrs. Dewey believed the choker to be genuine, friends declared that the widow of the hero

3 Tie for Lead; Bobby Jones 6 Strokes Behind

Horton Smith, French and Hines Get 70's; Putts of Georgian Costly.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Augusta, Ga., March 22 (AP).—The short, stocky figure of golf's one-time Napoleon strode over the rolling battleground of Georgia today to revive a flock of vivid memories, but strike only a few flashes of the commanding skill that marked his championship days as the big professional parade galloped past him on the field of action.

It wasn't exactly a Waterloo for Bob Jones, back to the wars after nearly four years of retirement, but the eminent Georgia barrister was unable either to locate the target with any consistency at short-range or match the swift pace of a combined charge by the old guard and the new. As a consequence, the former world champion signalized his return to battle by scoring a 76, 4 over par, and finishing the first round exactly 6 strokes behind the pace-setters for the initial 18 holes of the $5,000 Masters' Invitation Tournament.

As if encouraged by Bob's shaky start, the light-horse cavalry swarmed over the beautiful course to such an extent that nearly half the field of 72 passed Jones by the end of the day's skirmishing. The Georgian was buried away down the list, tied for thirty-fifth place, in the professional rush to take his measure.

The opening round was so hotly

Norfolk Frees Dry Offenders

51 Jail Prisoners Are Released and 60 Cases Voided.

Norfolk, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Fifty-one prisoners serving terms in the city jail for violating the prohibition law were liberated in a body today and similar cases against 60 others were dropped.

Judge J. W. Sargeant of Corporation Court No. 1 issued the order to free the prisoners and instructed the court clerk to erase from the docket the names of all persons accused of violating the Layman act and all other State prohibition acts.

With the advent of the legal sale of whisky in Virginia, Judge Sargeant ruled it would be an injustice to keep old violators in jail and subject others to trial for offenses committed before the new law went into effect.

George Gallup, a Negro youth accused of driving while drunk, was the only dry law violator not given his liberty. He was sentenced to jail for six months for driving a car while drunk and as the new law imposes a heavy penalty for such offenses Judge Sergeant ruled he must serve his term.

Storks Back Up Hitler Campaign Of Big Families

Berlin, March 22 (AP).—Storks, those harbingers of healthy and happy families, now seem to be back of Chancellor Hitler in his campaign for a bigger population.

At Kottbus—where Clarence Chamberlin landed in 1927 after the first nonstop flight from New York to Germany—for example, there were only 75 storks in 1931. Now there are 249.

All German citizens received orders today to purchase a forthcoming book dealing with "the prevention of offspring with hereditary defects or diseases."

It will have several articles by leading German eugenics and race experts.

AAA Charged With 'Fixing' Dairy Prices

Demand for restoration of milk marketing agreements canceled by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration after retirement of George Peek as administrator, featured a conference yesterday of 109 executives representing milk producers' cooperatives of 44 States.

The executives also charged Secretary of Agriculture Wallace depressed prices to kill the cooperative movement in this country.

Delegates to the conference, representing more than 500,000 milk producers throughout the country, also revealed complete lack of success in their efforts to reach the ear of President Roosevent with their demand for removal of five of the economists of the AAA.

Faced With Ruin.

Meeting at 1731 I street northwest, the cooperatives' representatives heard Roy M. Pike, of the El Solyo Ranch, Vernalis, Calif., declare that "milk farmers are being brought to penury and ruin by the AAA because it canceled our milk marketing agreements and refused to allow us to enforce resale milk prices of any sort."

John Brandt, president of the Land o' Lakes Creamery, Minneapolis, largest cooperative in the country handling butter, presented a plan for simplified dairy marketing through a surplus purchase corporation.

It was asserted at yesterday's meeting that a similar plan had been scrapped by the Secretary of Agriculture because it was holding up prices, and these prices "were depressed purposely to kill the cooperative movement in the United States."

An executive session of the milk producers was called to formulate a program to be urged upon President Roosevelt in the event the delegates obtain an audience.

Speaker Raps Economists.

In his address to the producers, Pike expressed warm admiration for President Roosevelt, but not for the economists of the AAA, some of whom he characterized frankly as "nuts and bums."

Faith in the President is being shattered today among representatives of the agricultural population, he warned, because of the activities of some of the economists, to whom has been delegated "his great plans for recovery."

"Delegation of that authority in relation to milk has been our tragedy, and if the President could know the savagery with which his plans have been miscarried and delayed, he would weep bitter tears," Pike declared.

"I am attacking, not the President, but his detractors within his own organization.

"The cause of milk producers being in a worse fix than a year ago is the failure of Henry A. Wallace. We demand he pay some attention to the counsels of men who for years have been in the business of production and distribution of milk; that he believe we are as

Boy, 7, Run Over By Train, Unhurt

Suffolk, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Mitchell Hunter, 7, who was playing on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, near here, yesterday, is alive today after being run over by a train. He fell between two ties and had presence of mind to lay flat until the train had passed over him, so was not hurt, except for bruises.

Mitchell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hunter here.

The mother fainted when she was told a train had passed over the boy, and was in worse condition than Mitchell when a doctor arrived.

Auto Workers Study Extension of Truce As Peace Hope Gains

3 Killed, 3 Injured In Crash of Airliner

Two Americans and Briton on Crew Die; Trucco, Chilean Ambassador to U. S., Hurt When Plane Cracks Up at Take-Off in Peru.

Lima, Peru, March 2 (AP).—The crash of an air liner at its take-off today resulted in the deaths of three crew members—two Americans and a Briton—and injuries to three persons, including Manuel Trucco, Chilean Ambassador to Washington.

The envoy, who was returning to Chile from the United States, following upon the death of his wife, March 17, at Santiago, suffered fractures of the hip and pelvic bones.

Senor Trucco's two daughters, Grace and Rebeca, were accompanying their father, but escaped injury.

The Pan-American-Grace Airways craft, with 12 persons aboard, had climbed about 60 feet when it fell. The dead:

Homer V. Farris, pilot, 38, a native of London, Ky.. He had 6,000 hours' flying time to his credit, and served in the American Army from 1917 to 1919.

Senorita Carmela Bustamante.

Capt. Harris and McGregor had visited Lima and were going to Santiago to continue a survey of Pan-American-Grace stations.

McGregor said the plane took off five minutes behind schedule and that the load was les sthan the capacity of the craft. He could ascribe no reason for the accident.

Mendoza, Argentina, March 22 (AP). Heavy summer thaws enabled two mountaineers on muleback today to find the wreckage of a Pan-American-Grace airliner and the bodies of nine men who started from Santiago, Chile, 20 months ago for a flight across the world's highest air route.

The plane was sighted, its nose buried in the slaggy slope of Cerro del Plomo, almost due east of Santiago and 4 miles south of Puente del Inca.

The craft was not burned. One body was headless, but the others, four of which were outside the plane, were well preserved. The place where it was found is not far off the routes through the Andean pass habitually followed by Pan-American-Grace planes.

The bodies were being brought to Mendoza tonight by an expedition headed by Pan-American-Grace and Argentine authorities.

Two of the occupants were United States citizens. The ship carried six passengers and three crew members. They were F. E. Camus, division traffic manager of the air line; J. C. Sabate, O. S. Pezet, E. E Raffo, Pinkus Rotszyld, F. L. America, Charles J. Robinson, pilot; C. W. Myers, radio operator; A. Woods, steward.

Robinson left a wife and two children in Chicago. The parents of Myers, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Myers, live in Canton, Ohio.

Borah Scores AAA Program As 'Starvation'

Idahoan Takes New Stand, Urging Policy in Line With U. S. Heritage.

By Raymond Clapper.

Senator Borah has come back to life, reconnoitered and taken his stand halfway between the Tory and the New Deal camps, where he is prepared to battle it out through the summer.

Last night in a radio address he condemned the Administration's drastic curtailment of food crops at a time when millions here and throughout the world have not enough to eat. Earlier in the week he arraigned NRA as an agency which was playing into the hands of monopoly.

The system consisting of curtailing a so-called excess production, "if successful," the Senator said, "would stabilize production on the basis of starvation."

The plan now proposed for crop reduction in this country calls for the withdrawal of 43,000,000 acres, or about one-eighth of the crop-bearing lands, Senator Borah pointed out, and would, in his estimation, throw out of work a farm population of about 3,250,000.

"My contention is we should leave these people on the lands and do everything we can to keep them on the land," he explained; and, even though most of the lands to be withdrawn from production are "marginal lands, where people can not make a satisfactory living, . . . these people are better off on mar-

Senate, House Set to Revise Air-Mail Bills

President, After Parley, Reported Firm on Private Return.

As President Roosevelt yesterday again discussed the air-mail situation with Administration officials, both Senate and House Postoffice Committees were preparing to draft air-mail bills for early report to Congress.

From the House committee came word that executive sessions will be held in the next few days, with the hope of a report next week. One of the principal divisions of opinion concerns whether to return the mails to private lines on a fixed-rate basis, or by competitive bidding.

The latter method is favored by the Postoffice Department, whose bill, nevertheless, is expected to undergo considerable revision.

In the Senate, sentiment is said to favor the proposal of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, which would apply to air mail the railway mail system.

Attending the White House conference were Attorney General Cummings, Secretary of Commerce Roper, Aeronautics Director Eugene L. Vidal and three officials of the Postoffice Department—W. W Howes and Harllee Branch, First and

'Hexed' Youth Reenacts Slaying Of Woman Who 'Cast Spell'

Pottsville, Pa., March 22 (AP).—In the dark before dawn in a woods back of Ringtown, Albert Shinsky, 23, of Shenandoah, today reenacted the slaying of Mrs. Susan Mummey, 63. He told County Detective Louis Buono he shot the woman because she "hexed" him eight years ago.

"In Pennsylvania German folklore, one who is "hexed" is bewitched. Shinsky said that eight years ago Mrs. Mummey "brought a spirit down from the sky" and that he has been ill, tired and depressed" ever since.

Buono quoted Shinsky as saying he killed Mrs. Mummey last Saturday to "break the spell." He was charged with murder.

Shinsky showed how he saw two shadowy figures in the dwelling and could not determine which was Mrs. Mummey. Then, he said, the woman's daughter, Tuvelia, came in with a lamp. As Mrs. Mummey leaned over Jacob Brive, a boarder, to dress his injured foot, Shinsky said he fired.

The youth said he was "hexed" over ownership of a farm.

Shinsky said that up until that time he had been a hard worker, but that after the "spirit came out of the sky" he lost his vigor.

Shinsky said that twice every month he was unable to sleep and that on these occasions a huge black cat, with green eyes, appeared out of the darkness and tore at his sides.

He declared he was helpless to drive away the cat until he chanted three phrases recommended to him by a "hex pow-wow doctor" in Hazleton, Pa.

Hope for Peace Gaining After Labor Parley With Roosevelt.

Railroad Mediation Begun by Eastman

Longshoremen Also Put Off Walkout on Plea of President.

By Felix Bruner.

With announcement that "substantial progress" was being made in the attempt to avert an automobile strike, representatives of the unions were meeting last night to consider their next move. It was reported that the President had asked the workers to give him 48 hours more to attempt settlement. It was indicated this request would be granted.

The meeting followed a four-hour conference of union representatives with the President. At the White House it was said that the next move would be a report from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, or Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, or both. This led to the belief that the President had made a definite proposal to the labor representatives, but the nature of such a proposal was carefully guarded.

Meanwhile, the President intervened in another labor controversy. He asked the longshoremen's union, which was planning to start a strike on the Pacific Coast today, to suspend action pending an investigation by a board to be appointed by the President. He received a reply that the strike had been suspended.

Railroad Mediation.

The railroad labor wage controversy was in the process of negotiation, with Joseph B. Eastman, railroad coordinator, as arbiter. Eastman met with the managers during the morning and with representatives of the workers during the afternoon.

Green was smiling as he emerged from the President's conference on the automobile controversy.

I can not say anything except that we had a very pleasing and most interesting meeting," he said. "In my judgment, most substantial progress is being made."

This was taken to indicate that President Roosevelt had been at least not unfriendly to the contentions of the employes, who are demanding union recognition by the employers. There has been no tendency on the part of either employers or employes to recede a parti-

N.Y. Strikers Wreck Taxis

Police Unable to Round Up Rioters: One Group Meets Mayor.

New York, March 22 (AP).—To the tune of splintering glass and grinding steel, approximately 200 striking taxicab drivers marched on City Hall today and then spread through the midtown area, wrecking cabs and beating chauffeurs as they went.

In their wake they left a trail of shattered taxis in the middle of streets, doors flopping crazily and their drivers nursing cuts and bruises.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who earlier in the day declared the strike had been taken over by racketeers and strong-arm gangs, was out to lunch when the marchers reached City Hall.

After an orderly demonstration on the plaza the strikers started back uptown.

Police cars and armored motorcycles whined through the streets in their wake, but were unable to shepherd the yelling, scattering men, who pounced on every cruising cab that failed to elude them.

One group encountered Mayor LaGuardia returning to City Hall. His limousine was surrounded. Some booed the mayor, others cheered him.

At Lafayette and Bleecker streets the marchers encountered a woman driver with two men passengers. Amid shouts of "rat," "scab" and "strikebreaker," she drove off, unmolested.

Woman Who Battled Cruelty to Horses Dies

New York, March 22 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Gibson Allis, 84, who spent a fortune to prevent cruelty to horses, was found dead in the Andrew Freeman Home for Impoverished Ladies and Gentlemen yesterday with an open bottle of chloroform tied at her nostrils.

Mrs. Allis was the founder of the Workhouse Relief Bureau of Brooklyn. She made an occupation of walking the streets of Brooklyn to watch for mistreatment of horses, and often took drivers to court for cruelty. Her crusade lasted 30 years.

Call Expected To Show Bank Status on Gain

Report Now Would Show Most of Lost Ground Recovered.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

A resumption of the usual March "call" for conditions of National banks in an effort to publicize improving banking conditions and as a gesture of confidence to business was indicated yesterday in Administration and banking circles.

The Government makes at least three "calls" annually and as many more usually are necessary. In the past 11 years, as few as three calls have been made only in 1926, 1932 and 1933, while six calls annually were made from 1914 to 1920.

Usually, calls have been made in March, but these were suspended during the past two years, presumably because of unsettled banking conditions and the difficulty of making accurate condition statements due to fluctuating security and real estate values.

The United Press was told on high authority yesterday that a bank call now would show practically all the ground recovered that was lost during the drastic banking "cleanout last year." Banks were strengthened by $1,000,000,000 of Government money advanced through the RFC.

The country's 5,159 National banks are believed to have increased their deposits by $500,000,000 in the first quarter of this year to above the $18,000,000,000 mark.

On December 31, 1932, the last call date prior to the National banking holiday, the 6,016 National banks had total deposits of $18,518,107,000. These dropped to $16,774,115,000 for 4,902 National banks on June 30, 1933. By December 31, 1933, they had risen to $17,589,882,000.

Banking officials also report a steady strengthening of the position of the banks through new capital and liquidation of slow assets.

Reports to the RFC indicate a continuing improvement in business sentiment. Banks which borrowed heavily from the RFC have found conditions improving so that they are making repayments at a faster rate than anticipated.

Dail Votes Bill To Kill Senate

Dublin, Irish Free State, March 22 (AP).—President Eamon De Valera, his dander aroused when the Senate blocked his "anti-Blueshirt" bill, struck back today with a measure to abolish the second chamber.

His supporters in the Dail Eireann immediately fell into line and passed the measure on first reading by the convincing vote of 79 to 43.

Calling the Senate "a menace," De Valera said it had "gone out of its way to hold up policies put before the country by the government and approved in two general elections."

The day's developments led to speculation as to whether a general election might not be imminent.

De Valera acted after the Senate had killed a bill banning the wearing of political uniforms and outlawing all military or semimilitary organizations except those of the government.

It was aimed at "Blueshirt" organizations which have fought the government bitterly for months under Gen. Eoin O'Duffy.

The government was rebuffed yesterday by a high court ruling that a military tribunal did not have the power to try O'Duffy on charges of sedition and inciting to murder De Valera.

Dewey Gems Paste; Sale Is Ordered of Manila Bay had often expressed an aversion to imitation jewelry.

They said that the gems were given to Mrs. Dewey by her mother, Mrs. Washington McLean, on her death, and at the time of the bequest, or any time since, there was no reason to think that they were paste.

It was learned the choker was virtually worthless in District Supreme Court when it was ordered that it be sold to Frederick McLean Bugher, Mrs. Dewey's great-nephew, for $1,000.

The choker was originally valued at $15,000 by the court appraiser, but when the trustees of Mrs. Dewey's estate tried to sell it they were told that the pearls were paste imitations. Its value was reduced to $2,000.

Another examination by the experts disclosed that the diamonds were of little value because they were "old mine cut," and appraised at only $1,000. Consequently the trustees recommended the sale to Bugher, who said he made the purchase for sentimental reasons.

Another order signed yesterday directed distribution of $284,000 from Mrs. Dewey's estate. This goes in equal proportions to the trustees of Edward Beale McLean, Bugher and the National Savings & Trust Co., and Alvin Untermyer.

Texas Hatchet Killers Receive Life Terms

San Marcos, Tex., March 22 (AP).—Mateo Cuellar and Julian Ybarra were convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment today for the hatchet slaying of Claude E. Kelley in what prosecutors described as a political plot against the life of his father-in-law, E. C. Couch, Hidalgo County judge.

Kelley was slain in the Couch home five years ago as he slept in the bed usually occupied by Couch. The State sought to show that certain political groups wanted Couch, a leader in an opposing faction, out of the way.

Politics and People

By Elliott Thurston

Until Postmaster General Farley indicated that he would support Charles Elmer Broughton, Sheboygan publisher and regular Democrat, in the Wisconsin senatorial race this year—thus turning the Administration's largest political back upon New Dealer Senator "Young Bob" La Follette—a few political crystal gazers imagined and hoped that the New Deal would reshuffle the long since badly scrambled political decks.

Aside from the confusions that this would eliminate at Washington, it would in all seriousness make for better, more effective government, assuming that the two-party theory is valid. The complications resulting from the fact that Congressmen labeled Democrats believe with, but combat, Congressmen labeled Republicans, and vice versa, are infinite and bewildering.

The spectacle of Regular Republicans quarreling with Irregular Republicans has been for years an amusing sight—for the Democrats. At times the Old Guard would rise up to read the Irregulars out of the party—whereupon at the next elections the voters would read the Irregulars right back into the party, where they would continue to be thorns in the side of the Regular Republicans.

* * * *

Just now the difficulties arising from what might well come under false branding laws are less than excruciatingly funny to the leaders of both major parties. Mr. Roosevelt certainly would much prefer to have in the Senate as intelligent, experienced and sympathetic a New Dealer as "Young Bob" La Follette than the Sheboygan publisher, whose claim to New Deal support rests primarily on the label "Democrat."

Yet the rules of the game by which the label outweights all else, including convictions, require that Mr. Farley indorse the label-wearer and sacrifice an able young Senator who is sincerely in sympathy with the New Deal's ideas.

Under the same rules, men like Senator Carter Glass, labeled "Democrats," are supposed to trail along with New Deal policies with which they violently disagree. Mr. Glass, alone on his side of the chamber, had the temerity to vote against the recent gold seizure bill. But many more Democrats, less indifferent to the political consequences of such "heresy," agreed with Senator Glass.

Political history is, of course, packed with examples of party votes contrary to private convictions. Defenders of the two-party system can, and, if provoked, will talk for hours explaining how honorable and essential this is. Party loyalty in this view transcends everything including conscience.

Nevertheless, much of the present scrambling of convictions and conscience could be avoided by a new deal of the political pack. If a two-party system must be preserved, then the two broad divisions would be, not Republicans versus Democrats, who are almost hopelessly mixed up with each other now, but perhaps conservatives versus liberals or nationalists versus internationalists, or Easterners versus Westerners. The labels do not make much difference, and doubtless would be almost as undescriptive as they are now. The gain would be in dividing up sides with some at least remote regard for what the two sides believe in economically, politically.

* * * *

Those Congressmen who do not know what they believe could be allowed to go with whichever side they preferred. This perhaps would leave a minority residue who do know what they believe—or believe what they know. Among the important results, probably, would be a crystallization of what the Republicans believe. As matters stand now, new Republican organizations are springing up or being resurrected almost daily, with ringing commitments to high but vague principles. So far, Ogden Mills is in a class by himself in having specified principles and suggested a program. He and Senator Glass, for instance, appear to see eye to eye. Hosts of those now tagged Democrats and Republicans agree with them. Combined they would make a real party, capable of performing the theoretically necessary functions of an opposition.

Then Republicans who complain about regimentation of industry and agriculture, managed currency and other components of a domestic "planned economy" would not be lining up almost solidly against a tariff policy which appears to offer the New Deal the only escape from these evils of nationalism. The Nationalist Democrats who are all for the regimentation and managed currency might then feel free to battle against reducing the tariff.

But unhappily the reshuffling is quite out of the question, great as the boons would be. Mr. Farley, who lately paid a touching tribute to the honesty of politicians—embracing, one would imagine, their intellectual honesty—knows that there is a higher virtue—party loyalty.

Welfare Head Choice to Wait On Conference

Commissioners and Board Will Meet Soon to Discuss Names.

Selection of a successor to George S. Wilson, director of the District Board of Public Welfare, will be discussed within a few days at a conference of the District commissioners and a special committee of the Welfare Board.

The committee is composed of W. W. Millan, chairman of the board; Sidney F. Taliaferro, chairman of the Emergency Relief committee, and Frederick McReynolds.

Among those being considered for the post are William Hodson, director of New York City emergency relief; Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest, and Katherine Lenroot, daughter of former Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin, who is now an official in the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

Under the law, the Welfare Board makes the appointment recommendations, which must be approved by the Commissioners.

Fay's Nurse Cleared Of Contempt Charge

Los Angeles, March 22 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth M. Curtis, who brought suit against Barbara Stanwyck, actress; her husband, Frank Fay, and his father, William Fay, for $3,500 she alleges is due her for services as a nurse and companion to the elder Fay, surrendered today in response to a bench warrant issued when she failed to submit documents for use as evidence in the suit.

She told Judge Frank C. Collier a telegram was the only document she possessed and she was absolved of contempt.

Congress to Revise Two Air Mail Bills

Second Assistant Postmaster Generals, and Karl Crowley, solicitor.

They maintained silence, but the impression prevailed that the President wanted to speed the return of air mail to private companies, along the same lines he recommended to Congress.

Chairman James M. Mead (Democrat), New York, of the House committee, said after conferences with Postoffice officials, that more lenient treatment for companies whose contracts were annuled had been agreed upon, although the principles favored by the President were not disturbed.

He said these companies would be allowed to bid for new contracts provided they were reorganized, divorced from holding companies and had none of the officers who participated in the so-called "spoils" conference. Under the present law, firms whose Government companies' contracts have been canceled, are unable to bid for a period of five years.

Meanwhile, early action was expected on the temporary air-mail bill, providing for the Army carrying mail with Postoffice Department funds. Officers and men now flying the skeleton routes have not been receiving the full $5-a-day allowance, which will be provided after passage of the bill.

Anne Arundel Doctors Elect 1934 Officers

Annapolis, Md., March 22 (Spl.).—Anne Arundel County Medical Society has elected officers for the year as follows:

President, Dr. Joseph M. Claffy, Gambrills; vice president, James J. Murphy, Annapolis; secretary, Maurice F. Klawans, Annapolis; treasurer, Frances E. Weitzman, Annapolis; delegate to State convention, John T. Russell; alternate, J. Oliver Purvis; board of censors, Dr. Frank H. Thompson and Dr. Robert S. G. Welch.

Love Found a Way, All Right—To Pay Mrs. Blacklidge's Board

Chicago, March 22 (AP).—Well, who won that $100,000 suit over the straying love of Patrolman Norman Nottingham?

Was it Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, former internal revenue collector, over whom there hangs a $7,500 judgment?

In a debtor's cell she sat, thinking of giving "Dear Denny" up. Here she was—room free for six months, or until she satisfies the judgment for alienating Nottingham's affections; board free, too, so long as Mrs. Susanne Nottingham (who won, on legal paper) was willing to pay the board bill at 50 cents a day.

Mrs. Blacklidge announced, as publicly as possible, that she was broke. And went to jail to prove it.

Mrs. Nottingham said she was, too, but sent a friend with $4 to pay the county to feed the prisoner for eight days. And there seemed to be a hint of compromise in her suggestion today that Mrs. Blacklidge could have her freedom back if she'd make "an honorable effort to settle at a reasonable price."

But the one-time Federal officer who handled millions in taxpayers' money gave answer that she lacked even the money to get to Canada, where she might have taken refuge at the home of a half-sister and escaped the jurisdiction of the Cook County courts.

So she settled down for a long summer's nap in debtors' row of the Cook County Jail, proclaiming:

"I'm going to stay the whole six months, if Mrs. Nottingham will be good enough to pay the board."

"Well, so long, Denny, you'll have to wash the dishes yourself now."

Idahoan Takes New Stand, Urging Policy in Line With U. S. Heritage.

He asserted that those who seek a solution to this problem should not lose sight of the fact that "you may impose upon a tired, worried and distressed people almost any policy for a time. But a permanent policy must conform to * * * that independence of judgment, that freedom of action, that love of liberty which, in the past, have made our country progressive and powerful."

Will Rally Doubters.

The return of Idaho's shaggy-maned lion from a long hibernation is timed, with his practiced skill, to rally and give voice to gathering doubts among many people as to where the Administration program is taking the country. Spoken opposition to the Administration has thus far come from the right wing of the Republican party, from conservatives like Ogden Mills and Representative James Wadsworth. But they labor against the mass feeling which the Administration has stirred up with its Tory label. Borah, on the other hand, strikes from a point somewhat to the left of other Republican critics, and appeals to the same audience which has been so completely evangelized by the new alphabetical language.

Therefore, some see Senator Borah shaping a new opposition line of thought, one which is neither New Deal nor Old Deal, but in essence a plea for a return to simpler government in the interest of the average man's liberty and pursuit of happiness. It is a plea for protection of this average man as against his regimentation. Though Borah is Hamilton's disciple, he is introducing more of Jefferson into his thought.

Fears Big Business.

Borah still refuses to go with Coolidge and Hoover doctrines. He wants action for silver and is not particularly solicitous about gold. He is against monopoly and fears large business. It is impossible to put him in the conservative opposition.

Yet he is equally at war with the Roosevelt policies. NRA and the New Dealers generally are not opposed to bigness. In fact, many of them feel that small industry is, generally speaking, inefficient. They are willing to let industry be as big as it wishes, and they waived antitrust laws which were designed to break up big stones into little ones. They would trust to Government supervision to protect the public from these economic giants. Borah is distrustful. He says that under NRA there has developed a scheme for the elimination of small business and that almost everything the ordinary citizen must have, food, clothing, home-building material, is subject to mondpolistic prices and monopolistic control.

Always a Nationalist.

Borah also is disturbed over Secretary Wallace's agricultural policy. He sees tax money being spent to plow under cotton, to kill pigs, to let rich Iowa corn land and Kansas wheat fields lie idle when city children are short of food. In addition AAA has just proposed a 15 per cent cut in the production of milk and butter with a Government payment to farmers of about 40 cents for each pound of butter fat cut from the amount produced last year. Behind all this, Borah sees the beginning of compulsory regimentation as proposed in the Bankhead cotton bill, which has passed the House.

Always an intense nationalist, leader of the fights against the Versailles Treaty and the World Court, yet he balks at the consequences of a policy of self-containment which have led to the drastic agricultural control experiment, and urges action so that millions abroad who can buy only with silver may have the opportunity to take American agricultural products so that farmers here will not be taken off of their farms or be compelled to let a quarter of their fields lie idle. Circumstances are making this much of an internationalist out of Borah.

Still Defies Labels.

Always a lone rider, Borah still defies those who like to have definite labels attached to their heroes and bogeymen. New Dealers describe him—with just a slightly condescending inflection—as an old-fashioned liberal.

You might describe the Borah cocktail as containing just one part Brandeis, which accounts for the anti-monopoly, anti-big business taste; one part Bryan, which explains why the free silverites of the agrarian West like it so well; one part Alexander Hamilton, which makes it constitutional, and two parts Borah, which gives it that tart touch that hits the spot at just the right moment.

Still, when it's all shaken up, the ingredients are so completely blended that the result is something distinctly different.

Portrait Showing 'Touch of Insanity' Pleases Culbertson

New York, March 22 (AP).—Ely Culbertson, the bridge expert, posed for a crayon sketch and after studying it carefully today said he was pleased to note the artist had caught "my touch of insanity."

The artist was Miss Peggy Bacon, who recently drew a caricature of Morris L. Ernst, liberal lawyer, and startled every one, including herself, by selling it to the Rockefellers.

Miss Bacon, who sketched Culbertson at the first municipal art exhibition in Rockefeller Center while an admiring crowd looked on, said the bridge master had a "very interesting face—especially the eyes."

Culbertson kept her waiting almost half an hour. When he finally arrived he explained he had been buttonholed by a man who wanted to improve his bridge stance.

Miss Bacon has drawn caricatures of Heywood Broun, who she termed "an enormous subject," and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia. When not drawing she writes—poems and children's books.

The association banquet will be in June, when 40 members of this year's graduation class will be added to the roster.

Order to Disband Refused Memorial

Court Lacks Jurisdiction, Justice Rules.

Because the "Ellen Wilson Memorial Homes, Inc.," was chartered by a special act of Congress, District Supreme Court Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday declined to permit its dissolution.

In declining to pass an order dissolving the corporation, Justice O'Donoghue held that the court lacked jurisdiction, and intimated it would probably take an act of Congress to permit incorporators to wind up the affairs.

The corporation was formed as a memorial to President Woodrow Wilson's first wife, to secure $25,000 in subscriptions and begin a campaign to remove alley dwellings. Because the full amount was not subscribed the corporation never functioned. It has approximately $15,000 which it is seeking to return to contributors.

Cudahy's Custody Of Son Favored By Psychiatrist

Milwaukee, Wis., March 22 (AP).—A psychiatrist was questioned today in an effort to establish whether Michael F. Cudahy, millionaire packer, or his wife, Mrs. Alice Dickson Pinto Cudahy, is better suited for hte custody of their child should Cudahy win his suit for divorce.

Dr. R. A. Jefferson said that a normal male child, after he reaches the age of 8½ years, finds his father's influence "paramount."

Dickie, only son of the Cudahys, is 8 years old.

"Criticism of a child's petty faults at an early age and constant emphasis of them through nagging tends to make a child believe himself faulty," the psychiatrist said.

Strike Foment Attempt Ousts CWA Leader

Worker Dismissed Because of Activities During Business Hours.

Accused of having tried to incite a strike of CWA workers at the H. D. Cook School, Joseph Zameres, secretary of the District CWA Workers Protective League, was discharged yesterday from employment.

Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District CWA, approved action of the job foreman and declared he had no objection to Zameres' carrying on his union activities on his free time, but is of the opinion that the dismissal was justified because Zameres tried to incite a strike while he should have been working.

Zameres admitted he had urged several men to strike, but asserted it had not interfered with his work. The reason for the desired strike, Zameres said, is that his organization is demanding CWA workers receive their pay while on the job, instead of on free time.

Zameres appealed to Capt. Clark to overrule the foreman's action. He said he now will appeal to Commissioner Allen.

Grocer Battles Two Intruders

Police Block Escape of Pair After Fight With Storekeeper.

Two alleged robbers were in jail last night, after a struggle with Basil Allison, who operates a grocery store in the 500 block of Kennedy street northwest, and Sixth Precinct police.

As Allison left his place of business early yesterday, he observed a man crouching in the shadows of the corner store. Allison drew his gun, and the stranger in raising his hands dropped a screwdriver. A moment later Allison was covered from the rear with a gun held by a partner of the intruder. A fight followed, and both men escaped.

Allison called police, and a scout car caught two men two blocks away. After a brief encounter, the suspects were arrested. They registered as Buddy Henson, 21, of the 2100 block of First street northwest, and Charles Bladen, 17, of the same address. Policeman F. E. Kenney, of the Sixth Precinct, was cut slightly on the hand by a butcher knife which, he said, Henson wielded.

Insull "Yacht" Long Overdue; Stays at Sea

Port Said Arrival Delay May Be Intentional; Wife Depressed.

Port Said, Egypt, March 22 (AP).—A belief that the ship Maoitis, Samuel Insull's "yacht," is deliberately delaying her arrival until the vigilance of authorities relaxes was expressed tonight as the fifth day passed without news of the fugitive.

The parade of steamships passing through the Suez Catnal for the Red Sea did not disclose the Greek freighter on which the former Chicago utilities czar left Greece Sunday.

One persistent report said the Maiotis was cruising off the coast near Dametta, only a few hours from Port Said.

According to this statement Insull was awaiting arrival of his Greek lawyer at Port Said aboard a plane, so that he would have legal counsel ready in case complications should arise on entering this port.

It wats also satid that an Insull agent passed through here a month ago en route to Abyssinia, to try to arrange for a sanctuary there.

Mrs. Insull, still in Athens pending the settlement of visa and passport difficulties, was said to have become ill from the stran of her husband's departure and efforts to avoid extradition to the United States.

Her attorney said she was depressed over the failure of the French consul to grant her a passport visa and that she had contemplated suicide.

Relief Speeded In Burned City

Deaths at 650; Hakodate in Ruins; Blaze Sweeps Suburbs.

Tokyo, March 22 (AP).—Relief work was speeded tonight in the port city of Hakodate, a mass of smoldering ruins after one of the most disastrous fires in the history of Japan.

An official estimate placed the death toll at 650. Nearly 500 persons were injured and 23,000 houses in the city of 213,000 population were destroyed.

By land and sea the government dispatched aid to the benumbed population. Six warships carried medical supplies, while the army took blankets and food.

Thousands of homeless persons searched among smoking ruins for loved ones as soldiers patrolled the streets to prevent looting. Scores of convicts were turned from jail when flames threatened the building.

After a night which survivors termed "a living hell," the flames today spread into the suburbs.

Wife Found Hurt, Husband Arrested

Woman Lying Injured on Road Names Him.

Westminster, Md., March 22 (Spl.). Found lying on the Westminster-Taneytown road yesterday, a woman who gave the name of Mrs. Jesse J. Hoke, of near Taneytown, was brought here and treated for a scalp wound.

Mrs. Hoke at first refused to reveal her name or tell how she was injured, but after being questioned by State Officer B. C. Mason she said her husband had struck her with a china bowl, and that she had left home and walked several miles before collapsing.

Jesse Hoke later was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Lee Crawmer and committed to the Carroll County jail to await a hearing before Police Magistrate George E. Benson, on a charge of assault.

Auto, Rail Disputes Bring Leaders Here

Associated Press Photos.

Leaders of automobile factory unions (top) are seen just prior to conferring with President Roosevelt in efforts to settle the dispute threatening a widespread strike. William Collins, of Detroit, American Federation of Labor organizer, is standing. Seated at the head of the table are Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. In the lower picture, Joseph B. Eastman, Federal railroad coordinator, is in conference with representative railroad managers relative to wage difficulties with workers. Left to right are Otto Beyer, director of labor relations in the office of the coordinator; Eastman, W. F. Thiehoff, chairman of the committee of managers for the railroads, and James W. Carmalt, of the coordinator's office.

Hope for Auto Trade Peace Gains

Labor Tells Grievances in Conference With Roosevelt.

cle. There was no indication that either side had receded. There was a feeling that thus far the labor representatives believe that they hav been making gains.

Auto Men Await Outcome.

Representatives of nearly all the automobile manufacturing concerns still were in Washington. It was explained that they were standing by awaiting developments or a possible call to the White house. There is no indication that they will be called until after the report is received from labor leaders. The manufacturers conferred with the President more than two hours Wednesday.

Gen. Johnson was present throughout the conference of the labor representatives. Following the meeting he said, "It looks brighter, but I can't tell until it is over."

Thirty representatives of automobile workers appeared at the White House when the conference was called at 2:30 p. m. They were taken into the Cabinet room while the President talked with Johnson. Then all of them went to the President's office. Half of them merely were greeted by the President and left. Fifteen remained.

The President heard in full labor's side of the case, it was said at the White House afterward. Practically all of the men present reviewed for him conditions in their local unions. After three hours the general conference was concluded. Green, Johnson, William Collins, National representative of the A. F. of L.; Arthur Greer, representing the workers at the Hudson factory, and John A. Bailey, representing the Buick workers, remained for another hour.

Progress Reported.

Afterward it was explained that no definite agreement had been reached and that negotiations would continue. It was said at the White House that "some progress" had been made.

Most of the men representing the workers said that they were actual factory workers and not merely labor organizers. Many of them explained that they had been discharged from their employment because of their union activities.

As they filed out of the President's office at the conclusion of the preliminary conference, the workers appeared to be in good spirits, but each explained that he had been instructed not to talk. One said that they had got along "just fine."

Meanwhile, the truce called at the request of the President continued and was expected to continue pending further negotiations. This was said to be particularly pleasing to the manufacturers who hope that if there is a strike it will be delayed, in view of the fact that the factories now are at the peak of their production. A strike several weeks, or even a few weeks, from now would not be nearly so serious from their point of view as an immediate strike.

Approves Grievance Board.

Before entering the conference Green was asked about a plan for appointment of a board to pass on alleged cases of discrimination among workers. He said such a board, composed of an equal number of employes and employers with a neutral chairman, and a similar appeal board, would meet with his approval. Appointment of such a board, however, would not settle the differences under discussion.

Green hurried from the White House to a radio station, where he broadcast a speech, in which he declared that "company unions are worse than no unions at all." His speech was in reply to recent statements of automobile manufacturers, in which they charged that the A. F. of L. was trying to seize control of their organizations.

"Company unions are creatures of corporations," Green continued. "They are set up, established, financed, fostered and maintained by the company.

Charges Company Control.

"The company unions are the means through which industrial management exercises control over the economic life of the workers.

"Workers who are compelled to join a company union are denied the right to engage in collective bargaining. Workers who suffer from injustice or oppression and who have real grievances haye no chance of redress when they are compelled to submit complaints and grievances for fair adjudication to those who are the paid representatives of the company."

Green urged enactment of the Wagner bill, which would virtually do away with company unions.

The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, representing employers involved in the controversy, declared in a statement that "confronted with the plain truth that the threatened strike is for union domination of the automobile industry," Green had shifted his stand.

The statement declared that Green's insistence that recognition of the A. F. of L. is not an issue was "camouflage."

"He knows the American people would not stand for an A. F. of L. dictatorship if they realized that was his real purpose," the statement said. "Yet Mr. Green himself has said that there is room for only one labor organization in the United States, and that if organized labor has to strike for what it wants, strikes must come."

Green, the statement continued, now says the workers merely ask the manufacturers to deal with representatives chosen by the workers.

Intimidation Denied.

"He evidently wants to make people believe that the manufacturers have not done so," the statement continued. "What Mr. Green says he wants is exactly what the manufacturers have done and are doing."

The statement said that employes of most companies have selected representatives and that the companies neither coerced them, nor intimidated them, nor interfered with their choice." It said collective bargaining is working "satisfactorily and with practical results."

The facts, the statement said, do not support Green's charge that employe elections were unfair. It said that many of the representatives of employes are officers and members of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L.

"There should be no misunderstanding as to the issue in this strike," the statement concluded. "Mr. Green seeks to make our employes believe that the Government favors the American Federation of Labor as the spokesman for labor and through such deception to fasten the closed shop on American industry.

"This issue is union domination."

Before the conference at the White House, representatives of automobile workers gathered at the A. F. of L. headquarters where they outlined their case and named their spokesmen. Collins presided at the preliminary meeting. Besides Collins, Green and Bailey, the official spokesmen for the workers included Al Cook, representing the Fisher Body workers; Richard Byrd, representing the Pontiac workers; David Lano, representing the Chevrolet employes, and Lionel Bently, representing workers at the Nash plant.

At the railroad conferences conducted by Eastman, it was said that no new matter had been injected into either meeting. Eastman heard the proposals of both sides. The employers have agreed to the proposal of President Roosevelt that the present wage scale, representing a 10 per cent cut under the basic rate, be continued. The original proposal called for an additional 5 per cent cut in pay. The railroad unions are asking for an increase of 10 per cent over the basic pay, or 20 per cent over the wages now received. It was at the President's suggestion that both sides agreed to lay their cases before Eastman.

President Roosevelt's intervention in the impending strike of longshoremen came at the request of George Creel, who recently resigned as California chairman of the National Emergency Council, but who has been attempting for a month to settle the controversy between the longshoremen and their employers. It was said at the White House that Creel will continue in the capacity of negotiator.

Creel telegraphed President Roosevelt that if a strike was called 12,000 men would quit work and that the result "is bound to be industrial war and a crushing blow to revived prosperity of the Pacific States."

Following a telephone conversation between Creel and the White House, President Roosevelt sent the following telegram to W. J. Lewis, president of the Pacific Coast District, International Longshoremen's Association:

"In public interest I am constrained to ask you to suspend strike order effective Friday, March 23, until an investigation of all matters in controversy can be made by impartial board which I will name. This board will be empowered to conduct hearings and make recommendations as a basis for peaceful settlement of differences by negotiation. I earnestly ask your cooperation and will appreciate an immediate reply."

Creel replied immediately that the strike had been suspended.

Byrd Tractors Win in Initial Antarctic Foray

Little America, Antarctica, March 22 (AP) (By Mackay Radio).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd said today that the first mass surface-machine expedition in polar history—sending a group of four tractors to a base south of Little America—was highly successful.

The four machines, in command of Chief Pilot Harold I. June, set out last Friday. Heading southward, the tractors drove through a northeast blizzard. At times the visibility was only 10 feet. Orange flags were planted by all machines to show their trail.

When June's heavy tractor broke down, the other three turned back, and by following the flags, found the fourth machine, stuck sideways in a crevasse. It had to be dug out.

Two airplanes, grounded on flights below the main base, were safe in Little America today.

Pilot William C. Bowlin and Radio Operator Clay Bailey were forced down last Saturday, and Admiral Byrd flew to their aid in an autogyro. The latter machine also, became disabled. Both returned together later.

Joseph A. Pelter, Pensacola, Fla., a cameraman, operated on for appendicitis last Thursday, was reported on the road to recovery.

Paraguay Predicts Final Chaco Victory

Rival Forces Prepare to Fight Key Battle.

Asuncion, Paraguay, March 22 (AP). Official claims of victories in the Ballivian sector of the Chaco battlefront indicate that the troops of this country and Bolivia are now entering what is expected to be a decisive stag and Paraguay today envisaged a victory.

The opposing armies face each other in the general area of Fort Ballivian, a major Bolivian base, and Pilcomayo River fortress, to which the Bolivians have retreated systematically since the main battle line in front of Fort Saavedra was crushed in December.

Ballivian is the well fortified junction of the two Bolivian highways knitting the network of Chaco forts which Paraguay has occupied in the last four months. The Paraguayans are pressing toward it from the east and southeast over both roads.

Bloodstain on Rare Confederate Prayer Book Mute Reminder

Boyce, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—A Confederate soldier's prayer book, believed one of few ever printed and the only one of its kind found in this section of the State, is owned by H. L. Pipher, of Boyce, who inherited the brochure from his uncle, the late Sergt. DeKalb Pipher, C. S. A.

The prayer book is about two by four inches in size, paper bound, and contains the complete service of the Anglican Church for worship in camp, or on the field. The frontispiece of the book reads:

"A Confederate Soldier's Prayer Book, a Manuel of Devotion, compiled mainly from the Book of Common Prayer and arranged for public and private worship in camps and hospitals by the Rev. Joseph W. Murphy, chaplain, Thirty-second Regiment, N. C. T., and published by St. Paul's Congregation, Petersburg, Va."

Sergt. Pipher entered the Confederate service early in the Civil War. When he was mortally wounded in one of the last engagements of the war, comrades found in his tunic the little prayer book. A bloodstain from his wound discolors the front cover.

Included in the prayers are supplications for the peace and safety of the wives, sons, fathers and loved ones of the soldiers, and for the blessings of Providence on the President of the Confederate States. The prologue exhorts troops to reverence during Devine Worship.

Post Student Contest Total Reaches 6,476

Scholarship Offers Met With Enthusiasm in 3 States.

New enrollments in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition received during the past week brings the total of individual contestants to 6,476, and its roster of competing schools to 139. These cover the entire competition area, which includes the District of Columbia, Alexandria City and nine counties in Maryland, ten in Virginia and two in West Virginia.

From Emmitsburg, Md., came the enrollment of Mount St. Mary's High School, of which Father Sheridan is principal. Norbert J. J. Sullivan, English teacher in charge of the project there, said the entire senior class of 20 boys will engage in essay writing.

Other new Maryland entrants were Walkersville High School, in Frederick County, where William B. Gross, prinicpal, is directing the project, and Oxon Hill High School, in Prince Georges County, where the entire senior class is participating under William T. Jobe, principal, and Miss Mercedes Waldron, English teacher.

Hobart M. Earman, principal of Port Republic High School, in Rockingham County, Va., sent in his school's enrollment, and said members of his senior class are at work on essays. Miss Mary O. Miller, English teacher, is in charge.

All American history students of Haymarket High School, in Prince William County, Va., were reported as participating by Miss Elizabeth Vaughan, principal.

Winners of school finals, to be chosen by April 9, will receive certificates of award from The Post and will progress into division finals. Winners in the latter elimination, to be announced by April 15, will receive silver medals and will progress into campus finals at American, Georgetown, Howard and the Catholic Universities. At the campus finals, scheduled between May 1 and 15, winners of the project's major awards of five 4-year tuition scholarships will be determined on the basis of oral and written tests.

She Must Pay $1; Sued for $10,000

Jury's Verdict in Crash Action Against Woman.

Damages of $1 were assessed against Mrs. Lila Cramer, 4900 Hillbrook lane northwest, yesterday in the District Supreme Court in a case in which she had been sued for $10,000.

Mrs. Cramer was driving an automobile that collided with one driven by Mrs. Mary T. Elward, 4441 Hawthorne street northwest, at Forty-fifth and Cathedral avenue northwest, last May. Mrs. Elward claimed the accident was caused by Mrs. Cramer and the latter's answer was a charge of contributory negligence.

Rerouting of Car and Bus Lines Here Is Object of Survey.

For the next few months the Public Utilities Commission will collect transportation "dossiers" of 150,000 Washington residents to determine how to reroute street car and bus lines of the Capital Transit Co. to bring the greatest service benefit to the greatest number of persons.

Yesterday the first 40,000 cards arrived from the Government Printing Office. The cards will be distributed to residents through the Washington Board of Trade and Government departments.

Persons are asked to check in detail the method of transportation they use to and from their work, the time taken, where they park automobiles if used, and location of their homes and offices.

The card also inquires as to whether a shift for the better in street car service would cause the person to change his present mode of transportation. In the final question, the card asks for suggestions in improvement of street car service.

When these cards are returned to the utilities office, they will be punched in the spaces marked. Then they will be fed into a tabulating machine, which will compile the data from the punch marks.

The cards augment the study already in progress by the commission and the company. In this, 25 workers are riding cars, counting passengers and observing transfer conditions.

A reorganization of trackage in the vicinity of Fifteenth street and New York avenue is deemed certain because of the congestion there.

State to Limit Truck Weight

New Virginia Law Gives Power to Classify. Highways.

Richmond, March 22 (AP).—With the passage of the Harman act by the recent General Assembly, the State Department of Highways is expected to begin a more rigid use of its power to classify highways with respect to vehicle and load weight restrictions.

Just as it has used the older law arbitrarily fixing the weight capacity for bridges, the department now expects to apply the provisions of the act to more of the highways of lighter construction.

Under the old law the department was empowered to restrict the weight of traffic on highways, but the power was seldom used because of the inconvenience it would have caused persons living along the road.

Under the Harman act, however, the old law is liberalized. It provides that when a capacity load is fixed for a given highway, persons living along the roadway may exceed the capacity provided they take the shortest route to a road constructed for the heavier traffic. The same provision applies to vehicles hauling cargoes to persons living along the roads of restricted capacities.

Philippine Freedom, Treaty Navy Bills Pass in Senate

Time Is Extended.

As passed the bill limited the profits of shipyards and airplane manufacturers, in connection with this program, to 10 per cent.

By relinquishing the Philippine Islands the United States withdraws from the Orient in about 15 years. The bill passed by the Senate chiefly was a reenactment of the Hawes-Cutting independence bill which became a law over former President Hoover's veto more than a year ago.

The period in which the Philippine Legislature could indicate its acceptance of that measure, however, expired January 17, last. The reenacted bill extends the time in which the insular legislature may act to October 1. The bill also modified provisions in the previous bill, regarding the retention of military and naval reservations and because of that change it is expected to be accepted by the Filipinos.

Military Naval Stations.

The reenacted bill provides that on July 4, following the expiration of ten years from the date of the inauguration of the new Filipino government provided for in the measure, the President of the United States by proclamation shall withdraw and surrender all right of possession and control over the territory of the Philippine Islands, "including all military and other reservations of the Government of the United States in the Philippines, except such naval reservations and fueling stations as are reserved" by the bill.

The President is authorized to enter into negotiations with the new Philippine government, not later than two years after his recognition of its independence, "for the adjustment and settlement of all questions relating to naval reservations and fueling stations of the United States in the Philippine Islands, and pending such adjustment and settlement the matter of naval reservations and fueling stations shall remain in its present status."

The Hawes-Cutting independence act provided that the President of the United States could retain such military and naval reservations as he might desire. The Filipino leaders objected, contending that as long as this country kept soldiers quartered on Filipino soil the island could never be a free nation.

During the many years that Philippine independence has been debated in Congress there has been much said to the effect that as soon as the islands were freed by this country they would be seized by Japan or some other Oriental power.

The measure now passed requests the President at the earliest possible date to enter into negotiations with foreign powers with a view to the conclusion of a treaty for the "perpetual neutralization of the Philippine Islands, if and when Philippine independence shall have been achieved."

The part which Philippine independence may play in the foreign affairs of this Government was not, however, a dominating factor in determining Congressional action. The chief factor, apparently, was a desire to stop the duty-free flow of sugar and vegetable oils from the Philippines into this country, where they come into competition with domestic production.

AAA Fixed Milk Prices, Is Charge

socially minded and alive to the needs of economic planning as the immature, inexperienced theorists and orthodox economists who surround him, and who have led him and us into this awful morass.

Predicts Their Ouster.

"We're going to fire these men, because we're going to tell the facts to their boss, the President."

The Californian named Jerome M. Frank, general counsel of the AAA; Mordecai Ezekiel, economic advisory to Secretary Wallace; Victor Christgau, assistant to Chester Davis, farm administrator; Fred Howe, AAA consumers' counsel, and Prof. Rudolph K. Froker, assistant chief of the dairy section.

"To bring the constitutionality of the AAA price licenses quickly and successfully through the United States Supreme Court was the greatest service the Department of Agriculture could have done for the Nation," Pike asserted. "But I was never able to see in Jerome Frank, the chief of the legal section, anything but evasion of this responsibility."

Demands Action.

He attempted to trace responsibility for cancellation of the milk marketing agreements, attributing the action to "that little group of men who are now running the milk show."

"We shall demand the President remove these men and substitute men who will put his great plan for economic recovery into immediate and sound operation," Pike said.

"Where is all this evidence that so many economists and college professors are so eternally competent in administration of either government or business? There are a lot of nuts and bums among them, just as there are among business men and farmers.

"Our milk policies must be corrected now, not after further study and so-called economic surveys. We insist that the AAA promptly put into effect additional agreements along similar lines which have been placed before them."

House Insists On "5-5" Plan; Cuts Veterans

Surprise Action Reverses Predictions; Parley Planned Today.

country, inspired by John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative of the American Legion, turned the tide yesterday in the House in favor of the Taber amendment for veterans' benefits, and doubtless carried the 5-and-5 pay plan along with it.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders predicted prior to the vote that Administration supporters would line up with the veterans' bloc in a vote to concur in the Senate amendments, so that the President would have ample excuse to veto the measure. Speaker Rainey, at his morning press conference, expressed confidence that such would be the outcome.

Administration leaders believed that after the bill was vetoed, another measure more in keeping with Roosevelt's wishes could be drawn up and passed.

Close to Last Vote.

The House vote on pay restoration yesterday, the fourth within a fortnight, was very close to the last record vote, and the tenor of the debate indicated that the members firmly believed that a restoration of 5 per cent retroactive to Februray 1 and another 5 per cent July 1 were ample.

A motion by Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, leader of the veterans' bloc and the full pay advocates, was to recede and concur in the Senate amendments. It was defeated 228 to 164 on a roll call vote after a standing vote of 146 to 98.

Those voting for the motion and in favor of full pay restoration July 1 included 72 Democrats, 87 Republicans and 5 Farmer-Laborites. The opposing votes comprised 211 Democrats and 17 Republicans.

The Taber amendment affecting veterans was sustained by 220 to 174 on a similar parliamentary procedure. This vote showed a loss in strength in the veterans' bloc as the amendment has passed previously by only 1 vote, and that after Representative Kennedy (Democrat), New York, had changed his vote.

On the veterans' issue, 197 Democrats and 23 Republicans voted to insist on the House compromise, while 88 Democrats, 81 Republicans and 5 Farmer-Laborites voted to concur in the Senate amendment.

Legion Fears Veto.

Numerous members stated on the floor that they had received telegrams from John Thomas Taylor or local American Legion commanders urging retention of the House amendment on veterans' benefits on the ground that the Senate amendment was certain to bring a veto and probably no aid for the veterans.

Representative Connery charged the legion with backtracking, and declared that the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which, he said, is composed entirely of overseas service men, and other veterans' organizations were still holding out for the more liberal Senate amendment.

Representative Browning (Democrat), of Tennessee, appeared to express the sentiment of the majority however, when he remarked that it would be better to get "part of something than all of nothing." He said he would vote to override a veto if the House amendments were accepted by the Senate.

While the pay restoration amendment was under discussion, Representative Britten (Republican), of Illinois, asked Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House conferees, whether he would tell the House what the attitude of the Administration would be on the respective Senate and House amendments. Woodrum said he could not.

Representative Tabor (Republican), of New York, declared that it was "time for the House to assert its dignity and let the Senate know that when it says something it means it." He pointed out that the House had already voted three times on the controversial issues, while the Senate had voted but once.

Half-Century Career Feted

Matthew F. Halloran, 69, Begins 52d Year in Civil Service.

Matthew F. Halloran, 69, of Hyattsville, today observes the fifty-first anniversary of his employment by the Civil Service Commission.

Although now ill at his home, Halloran has remained on the active list of the commission ever since he entered the service as a messenger in 1883, under the Administration of President Chester A. Arthur. He served in this capacity until he was promoted to clerk in the division of certification.

During the World War and afterward, until he was made contact officer, hundreds of thousands of applications for Government jobs passed through his office.

The only original employe of the commission still in active service, Halloran found time to write a book, "The Romance of the Merit System," explaining the work in which he engaged.

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.
For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.
If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.
It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.
But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Berkeley County Loans Beginning

Edenbrook Orchards Will Get First Fund.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—The first completed loan made to orchards of Berkeley County by East-Central Fruit Growers Production Credit Association will be to Edenbrook Orchards.

Approximately 200 applications for orchard loans have been received by the East-Central, totaling more than $1,000,000, from West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware, says E. Lee Goldsborough, chairman of the board of directors.

Of this, almost $500,000 has been approved by the board and sent to Baltimore for approval.

Miller Rejected For Credit Body

Inspector Not Confirmed Despite Campaign.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Edwin W. Miller, of here, tentatively appointed inspector for East-Central Production Credit Association several months ago, has been notified that his appointment would not be confirmed by George H. Stephenson, president of Production Credit Corporation of Baltimore.

Miller had been teaching school in recent years, and regulations called for inspectors actively in touch with orchard work.

Miller was appointed by the East-Central directors, who carried on a vigorous effort to have Miller retained.

Elks' Rulers Exchange Visits to Aid Harmony

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Elks lodges of Martinsburg, Hagerstown and Frederick, Md., have adopted a plan for closer relations. The exalted ruler of each lodge will visit each of the others.

Last night R. M. Hall, exalted ruler of Martinsburg Lodge, accompanied by several other members, was in Frederick to address the lodge there. The Frederick exalted ruler will be here Wednesday night.

Policemen of Two States Seek Bad-Check Artist

Waynesboro, Pa., March 22 (Spl.). Pennsylvania and Maryland police today are seeking a bad check artist whose activity yesterday got B. C. Hull, Waynesboro auto radiator expert, into hot water.

The check artist evaded arrest by a few minutes near Camp Albert C. Ritchie at Cascades. One check was passed on a merchant at Blue Rock and another in Greencastle. In both instances Hull's name was forged.

Two Held for Trial In Taxicab Holdup

Hagerstown, Md., March 22 (Spl.). John Stover, 23, and Ray Etheridge, 23, charged with robbing Harvey Dowler, taxi driver, after assaulting him near here last week, today were held in $5,000 bail each for the next term of court by Magistrate Richard Duffey.

The two men and a companion are alleged to have hired the taxi here and to have robbed the driver and escaped in the car about 5 miles east of the city.

The taxi was found near Braddock Heights and Stover and Etheridge were arrested near Frederick. Dowler identified both as his assailants, police said.

Virginia Police Lose Autos Under Repeal

Danville, Va., March 22 (Spl.). The advent of a new liquor control era today found county police sadly crippled as all county prohibition agents who usually also act as constables have been compelled to turn in their State-owned cars. The Schoolfield police department was without a vehicle today. Even Chief of Police Lonzo Cole, who used the car awarded him as an inspector, was without a machine.

Commissioner of Revenue P. G. Ragland formally called on City Attorney A. M. Aiken today for a ruling to determine if Danville is dry or wet. Ragland took the position the city is dry and must vote itself wet. The city attorney took the opposite view.

5 Tried in Hijacking.

Petersburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Kenneth Lumpkin, Mike Manieri, Earl Pentecost, Dewey Manieri and Eddie Burkett, all arrested in connection with the alleged hijacking of an automobile cargo of liquor, are now being tried in Circuit Court here.

Former Employes Request Receiver

Cumberland, March 22 (Spl.).—Four former employes, claiming back wages, have filed a petition for a receiver for the Sullivan Bros Coal Co., which operates at Red Hill, east of Eckhart.

The petitioners and amounts claimed are William R. Eisel, $750; Roy Anderson, $450; Henry Diehl, $229, and George Diehl, $199.14. Judge Albert A. Doub signed an order for the defendant to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed.

Rites at Damascus, Md., For Mrs. Duvall Friday

Damascus, Md., March 22 (Spl.). Funeral services for Mrs. Jefferson Duvall, 63, sister of Downey Williams, former Montgomery County commissioner, who died Tuesday evening at her home near Mount Lebanon, will be conducted Friday afternoon by the Rev. W. Clark Main, pastor of Damascus Methodist Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Duvall, a daughter of Jerry Williams, is survived by her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Roland Mullinix, Damascus, and Mrs. George Marshall, Brentwood, Md.; and three sons, Downey, Leslie and Herbert Duvall, at home.

New School Is Projected At Sharpsburg

Release of $20,000 in Closed Bank Sought for Work.

Hagerstown, Md., March 22 (Spl.). If the Government will release $20,000 of Washington County funds impounded in a closed local bank, it is planned to erect a new school at Sharpsburg.

The county Board of Education was notified by Arthur E. Hungerford, NRA compliance director for Maryland, that the matter of releasing the money had been taken up with Washington.

The $20,000 represents part of the bond issue for schools. A bond issue of $45,000 also was authorized for school construction, but these bonds have not been issued. With the impounded money, if it is released, the bonds would be issued and work on the school started.

An effort also will be made to have the work made a PWA project so that 30 per cent of the cost could be obtained in a Government grant, and the Government accept the bonds.

The local PWA board also authorized the resubmission of eight school grading projects in the county, which are under way. The largest project is at Williamsport. An engineer will be employed to make the surveys required, and if approved the projects would be completed by another plan following the abandoning of the CWA.

Job Survey Started.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 22 (Spl.). A survey of unemployment in Franklin County is being conducted by the CWA here. Sixty-six are employed in the project. F. J. Easton, of Waynesboro, heads the county organization.

Martinsburg High Winners Selected

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Martinsburg High School's entrants in the sectional literary tournament, to be held at Shepherd College shortly, were named yesterday in open competition as follows:

Oral interpretation of poetry—Madge Starliper; oration Richard R. Feller, jr.; debate—Leighton Watson; extemporaneous speech—Boyd Siler.

Winners at Shepherdstown will enter the finals at Morgantown in April, where winners will get a four-year scholarship at the university.

Mrs. W. Boyd Lambert, Of Martinsburg, Buried

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Virginia S. Lambert, 52, wife of W. Boyd Lambert, who died Tuesday.

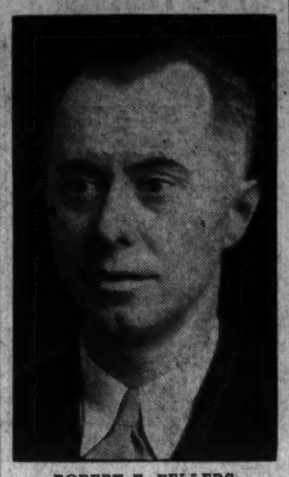
To Sell New Stamps



ROBERT E. FELLERS, superintendent of the Postoffice Department's division of stamps, who will be in charge of the distribution of the Maryland Tercentenary memorial stamps when they go on sale this morning at St. Marys City, site of the original capital of Maryland.

St. Marys City Mecca Today Of Philatelists

Stamp Collectors of Many Points Will Buy First of New Issue.

The small temporary postoffice at St. Marys City, Md., will be thronged with philatelists this morning, when the Maryland tercentenary postage stamps are placed on sale.

Collectors from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Wilmington and Richmond arrived yesterday, and many more are expected today.

The commemorative issue, authorized by President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley, will be distributed by Robert E. Fellers, superintendent of the division of stamps of the Postoffice Department. With him will be Mrs. Louise Shawan, of the philatelic agency staff.

Postmaster General Farley is not expected to go to St. Marys City, but it is understood he will be represented by Third Assistant Postmaster General Clinton B. Ellenberger.

St. Marys City is about 18 miles southeast of Leonardtown.

Mrs. F. W. Bridges Dies at Hagerstown

New Berkeley Welfare Board Picks Officers

B. A. Poland Heads Group; CWA Quota Cut by 110 Men.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—The new Berkeley County welfare board yesterday reelected as chairman B. A. Poland, who has held the chairman's post since the board was initiated in 1932. Howard H. Emmert was named vice chairman and Mrs. H. P. Thorn secretary.

The welfare board compries these officers: Mrs. E. C. Tabb, Mrs. Sallye Snodgrass, Thomas W. Martin, Charles M. Solenberger, Mayor C. H. Dailey, D. Gold Miller, Trammell Hollis, Frank Butler. Members ex-officio are Circuit Court Judge D. H. Rodgers and Judge John Ellis of county court.

Administrator H. C. Brooks announced that work on Shepherd Flying Field will be started and carried along, as planned some weeks ago, and that all vital CWA projects will be finished, although CWA will be changed April 1 to another type of relief work.

The reduction quota for Berkeley County CWA, effective Friday with the start of the work week, is set at 110. This will reduce the number of CWA workers in city and county down to 432.

The sanitary project will be pressed and 100 men will be assigned to this.

Moorefield Organizes Permanent Fire Body

Moorefield, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—A fire department on a permanent basis was organized here yesterday with W. D. McCauley president; M. A. Bean, vice president; Robert S. Kuykendall, secretary, and Earl B. Thursh, treasurer. R. J. Douglas was named chief. Nearly 30 men signed for membership.

Sight, Hearing Dim, Man Injured by Train

Hagerstown, Md., March 22 (Spl.).—Poor hearing and eyesight nearly cost the life of John D. Remsburg, 82, of Sharpsburg, when a northbound Norfolk & Western train struck the team he was driving.

Remsburg escaped serious injuries. The horse was killed and the wagon demolished.

Rail Head Doubts Labor Laws' Value

Mutual Respect Called Only Real Solution.

Hagerstown, Md., March 22 (Spl.). Declaring that he doubted whether new laws will do much to foster harmony between employer and employe, George P. Bagby, president of the Western Maryland Railway Co., in an address read at the forty-second anniversary meeting of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen here, said that just as liquor prohibition could not be brought about by law, any new laws would probably fail to improve relations between employer and worker.

"My judgment is that after all is said and done, the best assurance of pleasant relations lies in mutual respect and confidence between management and men," said the railroad head.

President Bagby's address was read by Vice President and General Manager Charles W. Brown, of the Western Maryland.

Hagerstown Fails To Win Rate Slash

Must Hire Paid Fire Chief, Underwriters Say.

Hagerstown, Md., March 22 (Spl.). If Hagerstown wants a reduction in its fire insurance rates, it will have to engage a full-time paid fire chief, removable only for cause, the mayor and council were informed by C. A. Hartman, of the fire underwriters association.

Reduction of about 5 per cent on property in the mercantile district probably would likely follow engaging a paid chief, Hartman said, and would prevent an increase of the private dwelling rate, which now appears inevitable.

Volunteer fire companies here have opposed a paid full-time chief in the past, and Councilman J. David Bowman said he felt this sentiment was unchanged.

Virginia ABC Board Opens Headquarters

Several Weeks' Wait Faces Purchase of State Liquor.

Richmond March 22 (AP).—Liquor became legal in Virginia at midnight last night, but last-minute statements from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board indicated it will be several weeks before it becomes available.

Offices opened at noon today on the top floor of the Central National Bank Building here. The three board members, S. Heth Tyler, R. McC. Bullington and T. McCall Frazier, were sworn in this morning and assumed office at once. Application blanks for positions as liquor store managers and employes were available at the office at noon today.

Tomorrow the board will announce hearing dates for liquor salesmen. Hearings for wine and beer license applicants will be arranged before April 2.

That was the situation as Virginia's 17 years of legal aridity drew rapidly to a close last night.

An informal ceremony was held at the Division of Motor Vehicles yesterday afternoon, during which Mr. Frazier, retiring director, was presented with a gold watch by members of his department. A presentation speech was made by T. Warren Topping, counsel. Mr. Frazier, responding, introduced John Q. Rhodes, who assumes the post. Like the liquor board members, Mr. Rhodes was inducted into office today.

Antietam Held 'Deadliest' Day

Hagerstown, Md., March 22 (Spl.). The battle of Antietam was the "deadliest single day" of the Civil War, Thomas L. Roy, supervisor of a historical survey of the battle and events leading up to it, said today.

Loy compared records recently compiled of losses in relation to the total forces involved in the battles of Gettysburg and Antietam, and showed that the loss at Gettysburg was 10 per cent, while that at Antietam was 21 per cent.

Different authorities give the total engaged at Antietam as from 97,000 to 152,000; the number killed ranging from 3,418 to 7,018; number wounded from 16,220 to 22,062, and number missing from 2,597 to 3,335.

Data gathered by the group of historians operating under the CWA, include battle records, photographs, human-interest stories and three notebooks of transcriptions from newspapers, diaries, scrapbooks and letters.

An effort is being made to attract more tourists to the battlefield, and a battlefield folder has been prepared.

Relics have been gathered and a museum established at the battlefield. Maps of troop positions during the battle and a map of the original battlefield, while another compares the original wooded areas with the present ones. Regimental organization lists also have been compiled.

Stone Concern To Stay Closed

Court Refuses Operation of Albemarle Firm Pending Meeting.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 22 (AP). Judge John Paul in United States District Court here late yesterday refused the request of receivers or custodians of the Virginia-Alberene Corporation to operate the soapstone plant pending the outcome of bankruptcy proceedings.

Judge Paul told the petitioners that any action must await the meeting of the creditors March 30 when a trustee in bankruptcy will be named.

The petitioners claimed there is a possibility of obtaining large contracts on Government buildings if contractors could be assured that the soapstone plant would be in operation.

The corporation filed a bankruptcy petition this month and Judge Paul named the plant manager as custodian.

Corn-Hog Officers In Page Selected

County Farmers Will Get $30,000 for Slash.

Shenandoah district—D. D. Kite, chairman; assistants, G. C. Kite and Kerlie Koontz. Marksville district—Reuben D. Koontz, chairman; assistants, W. N. Comer and T. R. Shirley. Luray district—J. W. Ruffner, chairman; assistants, F. S. Hershberger and W. D. Gander. Springfield district—E. J. Montgomery, chairman; assistants, Raymond Strickler and Frank Carveil.

G. H. Clark, county agent, says about $30,000 will be paid to farmers in this county for corn and hog reductions. Wheat contracts brought farmers about $24,000. About 4,600 acres have been omitted from corn production.

Club Is Sponsor Of Passion Play

Virginia Liquor Control Board Organizes; State Sales to Wait

Richmond, March 22 (Spl.).—Owing to the time necessary for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board which started operation today, to organize and put regulations into effect for private licenses for sale of beer and wines, purchase stocks of liquors, rent buildings, install fixtures and otherwise set up liquor stores, the Virginia liquor situation is somewhat confused, as far as law enforcement is concerned. The following facts obtain:

Only liquor in possession previous to last midnight is lawfully held, except that which may be purchased from a druggist under prescription issued by a licensed physician.

Another exception is that a gallon of liquor may be brought into Virginia from another State as baggage, regardless of the method of its purchase outside of Virginia.

No person may take a drink, or offer a drink of alcoholic beverages above 32 per cent to another in a public place without being guilty of a violation of the alcoholic beverage control law, subject to a fine of from $1 to $10.

A separate law, providing rigid penalties for drinking drivers went into effect yesterday. Severe penalties and revocation or suspension of licenses are provided.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will not grant permits previous to April 2.

Home manufacture of beer and wines for domestic consumption is permitted. Whisky can not be ordered shipped into the State except by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. None can be sent to individuals.

Search of premises or automobiles without a search warrant is prohibited, although evidence gathered without a warrant may be used in a prosecution. A person who buys alcoholic beverages that are illegally sold is guilty of a misdemeanor, the same as the bootlegger.

After licenses are granted for the sale of wines, no beverages of this character of more than 3.2 per cent may be purchased except from the State.

For wine and beer sales by hotels and restaurants and other applicants there will be two classes of licenses, but one establishment can not secure both. One provides for sale for consumption on the premises and another for off-premises consumption. When the State liquor stores open no beverages may be drunk in the store.

All offenses under the alcoholic beverage control act are misdemeanors except where a person engaged in the illegal manufacture or transportation of contrabrand shall have in his possession firearms or weapons of like kind. In the latter cases, the offender shall be guilty of a felony and subject to 1 to 3 years in the penitentiary, or 6 to 12 months in jail.

State Planning Board Outlines Wide Program

Virginia Begins Its Varied Campaign of Progress and Efficiency.

Richmond, March 22 (AP).—The Virginia Planning Board today moved to compile immediately the data necessary for formulating a master plan of progress for the Old Dominion.

The movement is in line with the National planning ideas of President Roosevelt.

An executive committee, appointed by Bov. Pollard last September and continued by the recent General Assembly, includes Chairman Morton L. Wallerstein, executive secretary of the Virginia League of Municipalities; Col. Leroy Hodges, managing director of the State Chamber of Commerce; Maj. Richard L. Messer, engineer for the department of public health R. H. Gillian, executive secretary of the Conservation and Development Commission, and Henry G. Shirley, chairman of the State Highway Commission.

Meeting with the board today were Gov. Peery and Irving C. Root, planning consultant, assigned by the Federal Government to Virginia and Maryland.

The object, a board statement said, is to "insure an orderly and balanced development of the Old Dominion; therefore, a master plan of progress must be formulated to guide the building of the new Virginia throughout the years," adding:

"This will require a thorough study of population trends in Virginia, and an adequate system of public works including parks for the State's tourist appeal; a plan for coordinated transportation; controlling natural resources; determining the best use of rural lands; reestimating needs of Virginia's public school system; redirecting the State's correctional activities; adjusting industrial development in balance with agricultural development, and planning simplification, economy and efficiency in local and State government.

State Teachers Elect Sophomore

Thelma Evans, Accomac, Wins in Virginia.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—A sophomore won the triangular contest for presidency of the student body of the Fredericksburg State Teachers' College.

Miss Thelma Evans, of Greenbush, Accomac County, was elected over Miss Marie Kraft and Miss Frances Mays. Miss Evans will succeed Miss Beatrice Child, of Woodstock, Conn.

She was elected secretary and treasurer of her class as a freshman and chosen as sophomore representative to the student council this year. She is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma, and has participated in a number of college dramatic productions.

Staples Sworn As Successor To Saunders

New Motor Official and Rum Board Members Also Take Oath.

Richmond, March 22 (AP).—Five new State officials, appointees of Gov. Peery, were sworn in today and immediately assumed their offices.

They were Abram Penn Staples, of Roanoke, new attorney general, succeeding the late Col. John P. Saunders; John Q. Rhodes, jr., of Louisa, who became director of the division of motor vehicles, and the continued service of Maj. Edwin three members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, S. Heth, Tyler, of Norfolk; R. McC. Bullington, of Richmond, and T. McCall Frazier, of Bluefield.

Immediately after taking the oath Attorney General Staples said, "I hope to have the benefits of the H. Gibson, Assistant Attorney General, and others of the present office staff."

A statement from Mr. Rhodes, new motor vehicle chief, expressed deep appreciation of the confidence in him displayed by Gov. Peery.

For the three members of the State ABC board the administration of the oath was the signal to begin their administration of the new liquor law. Since their appointment last week they have been busy in preliminary detail work in connection with the opening of offices and the inauguration of a State-owned and operated liquor dispensary system. The board's first formal act was to confer with the Governor. Later Chairman Tyler called on the attorney general.

Tender Journeys Up Swamp Canal

Carolina - Virginia Short Route Is Navigated.

Norfolk, Va., March 22 (Spl.). For the first time a lighthouse tender has navigated the swamp canal from Elizabeth City, N. C., to Norfolk, it was announced today by Capt. H. Almy, of the Norfolk Depot. He said the trip, which cuts the distance about 25 miles, was made by the Linden.

Tenders working in inland waterways have been using Chesapeake and Albemarle Canal.

The tenders Orchid and Speedwell are in Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac restoring buoys, lights and other navigation aids destroyed by ice.

Troop 43's Golden Arrow Patrol came second with 79; Blackfoot Patrol, third. Altogether, 11 patrols were entered, with excellent proficiency in first aid shown by all teams. Other troops with patrols entered were 124, 238, 204, 89, 27, 28, 12 and 15.

Try a Tree Hike.

Did you know that Washington has two trees over a thousand years old? Autographed copies of Erle Kauffman's 90-page stiff-backed book describing famous historic and memorial trees of Washington are available at headquarters, reduced from $1 to 25 cents. Just what you need to arrange a tree hike.

Camporee Dates Set.

Camporees will lead the spring activities of troops and divisions again this year. Divisional camporees scheduled so far are: May 19 for the troops of Prince Georges County; May 26, troops of the fourth division, and May 26, troops of the Redskin division. There will be a council-wide camporee early in June and a regional camporee late in August.

Scout Band.

As a new project, a group of interested scouts is endeavoring to organize a Boy Scout Band. This band is not a scout troop but a group of boys who are willing to meet once a week, Saturday afternoons. If you own an instrument and understand the fundamentals of playing, please send your name, address, phone number, instrument you own and play, and whether you have had previous experience in any band (experience is not needed) to Scout R. L. Hanson, care of Boy Scout Headquarters, 1018 Vermont avenue, and learn the details of this new project. Remember, this organization will not interfere with your scout work. No string instruments desired.

Camp Roosevelt.

Camp Roosevelt opens on Monday, June 25. That may seem a long way off, but it will be here before you know it. It is not too early to choose the date for your troop period down there, make reservations and begin to save for the big event.

Mobilization Reports.

Please report now on material collected thus far. Even though the report be preliminary and incomplete, we need to get some idea of the amount collected so that we may be prepared with trucks for the final collection. Report blanks are in the hands of scoutmasters, and additional ones are available at Scout Headquarters.

Scout Excursion.

Through the interest of Eugene S. Wilson, jr., member of the executive board and chairman of the council committee on cubbing, we have been offered the date of June 9 for a Scout excursion down the river to Marshall Hall at a rate that no Scout can resist. Arrangements have not yet been completed, but please hold that date open.

Arbor Day Is April 21.

A large number of troops have already made selections of trees representing particular States which their patrols are to plant on April 21. We hope that you are planning on a large attendance from your troop taking part in this community service.

Patrol Leaders' Camp.

Several places are still available for the 3-day encampment at Camp Roosevelt during spring vacation week. The attendance is being limited to patrol leaders and other junior leaders of various troops. The cost of the trip will not exceed $3. Present plans call for leaving Washington on Thursday morning, April 5, returning Saturday evening April 7.

Leaders to Plan Cub Show.

Cub leaders from all the dens and packs in the District of Columbia will meet Monday at the Leaders' Training Center, 1018 Vermont avenue. Plans for the Cub Hobby Show, scheduled for April 14 will be discussed.

Scouter Active in Texas.

Friends of Joe Rose are delighted to know that he is now active in Troop 15, Houston, Tex.

Joe has been a hard working and popular junior leader in Scouting circles here for several years, both on the staff at Camp Roosevelt and in service in Troops 25 and 625.

A large number of Scout leaders go out from Washington to various States of the Union, and although we are always sorry to see them go, local Scouting has a right to feel proud of the contribution they are helping to make to Scouting in other sections of the country.

The limpid, melting, golden notes of Paderewski are part of the genius of an immortal poet. But they are also proof of another thing: the sounding board of Paderewski's Steinway.

In a Steinway, the sound board is considered so important that our entire production schedule is gauged to it. Other parts of the piano may be completed in approximately eight months. The sound board requires years . . . several years even to season the wood to our satisfaction.

If we were willing to sacrifice the tone of the Steinway, we could buy our sound boards for a fraction of the cost of making our own; instead, we begin, almost with the felling of the tree. And each single three-inch board in our $1,000,000 lumber reserve has been subjected to seven individual inspections by us before it becomes a part of the Steinway. For the very grain of the wood will affect the tone of the finished piano!

Steinway prices are extremely low at present.

Keats In A Beauty Parlor.

In an atmosphere drenched with perfume and warmed by the gushing breath of chromium electric hair-dryers, 30,000 beauty culturists met this week in New York and signed a "beauty pledge." It was a passionate avowal by which they swore to hold their calling sacred. Before it is lost among the unnoticed trivia of the day it is set forth here as a wonderful example of what can really be done by a beautician when she puts her mind to it, to wit:

"I, having served my apprenticeship to Venus, the Goddess of Beauty, swear jointly by Venus and by Apollo, the physician, to serve the women of the world with the realization that to them beauty exceeds in importance even health. I swear never to forsake my calling and to serve sickness and health, with or without recompense, that which I believe the reason for our being—to be beautiful."

Such fealty to an ideal is overwhelming. Although it may read like a combination of the Book of Common Prayer, the inscription on the New York Postoffice and the pledge of an old-fashioned temperance society, the devout fervor beneath its verbiage is unquestionable. Not since the day when the country doctor rode in snow and rain, in daylight and dark, across the lonely fields of the back country, has any profession so delivered itself to the greater cause of humanity. It touches, to the core.

Thirty thousand beauticians sworn to a noble cause! It is wonderful! It will delight thousands who are not like that Daniel Gray of the poem who "could see naught but vanity in beauty and naught but weakness in a fond caress." They will be left speechless with admiration, which is perhaps just as well. Else they might be quoting, "Beauty is truth, truth beauty," and somehow or other Keats in a beauty parlor is beyond imagination. Apollo and Venus are quite enough.

One Could Be Spared.

From a strictly business viewpoint, says President Roosevelt, the Postoffice Department could probably dispense with the services of 15,000 employes. Fewer employes are needed to distribute a diminished volume of mail and otherwise conduct the business of the department.

Partly because of humanitarian reasons, and partly in hope of a business revival, however, the Administration keeps these 15,000 employes. Few will complain of that policy, as exercised toward those who have no alternative other than unemployment. But there is at least one prominent official of the Postoffice Department who has already two other jobs requiring much time and energy. Without working hardship on any one, the opportunity exists to diminish the number of surplus employes there to 14,999.

Spoils.

No great importance can be attached to the Norris amendment designed to forbid political appointments in the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. It is only a gesture toward the sound principle of choosing employes of an essentially business organization on the basis of merit and efficiency. The astonishing aspect of the controversy aroused by Senator Norris is the frantic efforts of Democratic Senators and Representatives to defeat even the principle of a nonpolitical HOLC.

The amendment would merely require that in the appointment of agents or employes of the HOLC "no partisan political test or qualification shall be permitted or given consideration" and that all appointments be made "solely upon the basis of merit and efficiency." The joker in the amendment is that it provides no machinery for the selection of employes without the aid of politics. Why didn't Senator Norris move to place the HOLC under Civil Service regulations? Without competitive examinations, conducted by an impartial body, any attempt to eliminate the influence of politics in personnel matters would be futile.

Nevertheless, the Democrats of the Senate, with a few exceptions, engaged in a bitter fight against the amendment. Fear of being denied the spoils of patronage brought forth many queer arguments. Senator Norris, an ardent supporter of the Administration, countered with a warning: "Let this giant corporation become a stinking mass of political corruption and even men like Franklin Roosevelt will be brushed aside because under his Administration corruption grew and spread." But the Democrats stayed with their patronage guns.

Since the Senate vote was taken a House committee has stricken the Norris amendment from the bill. In answer to inquiries President Roosevelt has given indorsement to the general principle of the amendment. But more aggressive action will be required to save this organization, designed to aid home owners, from becoming a catspaw of politics.

Less Milk, More Prosperity?

Every home in the country will be affected by the AAA's plan to reduce milk production and increase prices, if that formula should be accepted by the dairy industry. The plan seeks to enhance the income of dairy farmers who have had their cash earnings almost cut in half since 1929. It would also forward the development of pasture land where surplus grain now grows. But it is impossible to consider producers only in a program covering a product of such vital importance in the diet as is milk.

No one asserts that too much milk is being produced. Thousands of children are suffering from malnutrition because the consumption is inadequate. The AAA takes note of the fact that dairymen would have no problem if people had sufficient means to buy all the milk they need. "But the fact is," says Administrator Davis, "that consumer buying power is low, and while it remains so dairy farmers will suffer from low prices unless they can control their production to attain a better balance with effective demand." Since consumers have insufficient money to buy all the milk they need, prices are to be raised and production curtailed.

Experts admit that higher prices resulting from a processing tax on butterfat may reduce consumption of dairy products. The quantity of milk that can be moved into consumption is sharply limited by price. "For that reason," Secretary Wallace recently told the Senate Agriculture Committee, "any attempt to peg the price at unduly high levels would be self-destroying." Attempts of the AAA to uphold milk prices without reduction of output have failed. So the Administration, in effect, is now moving to penalize consumers for their lack of purchasing power.

To offset the adverse effects of this program upon milk consumption the AAA plans to spend $5,000,000 for distribution of milk to undernourished children; $5,000,000 to finance the transfer of dairy cows from areas having a surplus of milk to subsistence farms where milk is not available for home consumption, and $5,000,000 for eradication of bovine diseases. Each of these projects is well planned. But their combined effect upon our vast dairy industry, with its 26,000,000 cows and its annual production of 100,000,000,000 pounds of milk per year, would seem inconsequential.

Aside from its administrative complexities, over which the AAA is properly concerned, the milk program appears to be merely another turn in the cycle of uncoordinated and inconsistent adjustments through which we are spinning. Because of the intimate relationship between child welfare and an abundant milk supply, however, there is something particularly objectionable in resort to the creation of an artificial shortage to stimulate "prosperity." Opposition to the plan from the National conference of cooperative milk producers suggests that it may not be any more acceptable to the dairy industry than it is to the consuming public.

As An Age Builds.

As an age has built, so has it lived. It is an axiom of critics that all civilization is best expressed in the terms of its architecture. The grandeur of Greece, the glories of Rome, and the gaucheries of the nineties, are the obvious examples.

It really goes deeper than that. The history of almost any country as well as any age can be written through research in its architecture. From the plain, stanch farms of the frontier period, through the efflorescence of the Gilded Age, to Empire State or Radio City, we can see how America has grown, whether for good or ill. By following the side paths of architecture, too—for example, in the neglect of the lessons of Louis Sullivan—we can see what a nation has failed to learn.

These thoughts are not unconnected with an observation by Secretary of the Navy Swanson. "We are willing to move into an attic room," he says, "if we can have our ships. A navy consists of ships, not buildings."

Doubtless; but the complete measure of a civilization is defined by its buildings much more clearly than by its battleships. And it is much easier to build a navy to defend a civilization than it is to build a civilization worth defending. There is a belief in too many countries that strong fleets express national strength. In a limited way, of course, they do. But what would our historians yet unborn be able to say of this period if, in their researches, they found that our genius for design had spent itself on instruments of destruction? It is not for their naval architecture that Greece and Rome are honored by the modern world.

Instead of ships of war, how much more civilized an attitude would be expressed if this age could be remembered as one which had promoted a really significant revival in architecture. Not in garish buildings, not in pseudo-classic monstrosities, but essentially in pleasant, decent homes; in the replacing of slums by dwellings beautiful in their simplicity. If the billions that the "Great Powers" spend for warships could be diverted to this function our generation would have some reason to feel proud. And the heritage left behind us would be something more enduring than "adequate preparation" for the next world war.

Movie Censorship.

It was very considerate of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee to conduct hearings on Representative Patman's bill to provide Federal censorship of the movies. But that is as far as the committee or the House should be expected to go with this measure. Whatever may be said for censorship in general, it is not a Federal function, and even the steady centralization of powers under the New Deal does not make it so. No doubt the committee has already selected a pigeonhole where the Patman bill can be carefully embalmed with others by the same author.

Every community from Philadelphia to Zaro has its own laws against indecency. The American people have always resisted attempts to impose upon them moral codes manufactured in Washington. Why should any Congressman suppose that this resentment against Federal censorship would be mitigated in the case of motion pictures? It is true that this is the age of national codes, but that makes freedom from bureaucratic domination more, rather than less, desirable for the screen, as well as the radio and the press.

Behind The Blue Eagle.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association has decided to "place squarely before the public the manufacturers' responsibility for code provisions that dangerously raise prices." The retailers complain that they have been the "buffer between the consumer and the unwarranted price increases caused by the NRA codes." Of the 580 codes presented to the NRA, the association says, 254 have brought protests from retailers because of some price-raising tendency.

Complaints of this sort are extremely significant, because they call attention to intercode problems of great complexity. So far nothing has been accomplished toward coordinating activities of related groups of organized industries dependent upon one another either to furnish supplies or to provide market outlets. The retailers, through whom hundreds of industries reach the ultimate consumers, are naturally among the first to become acutely conscious of the limitations of special code agreements.

Every industry, however, is connected with numerous other industries both as buyer and seller. Automobile manufacturers are affected by the provisions of the steel code; garment manufacturers are vitally interested in the provisions of the textile codes, and so on through the whole intricate economic network. Consequently trade and industrial associations can not proceed far in their efforts to raise prices and control output without coming into conflict with other associations engaged in similar efforts.

Under the NRA, competition may be replaced by cooperation among the members of an independently organized group. But the competitive struggle between these larger unit organizations to obtain a larger share of a joint profit may become both bitter and costly, unless some super-regulatory body is set up to arbitrate disputes and assure coordination.

All of which is merely another way of saying that there are no logical stopping places along the road which is euphemistically labeled "planned economy." If we intend to substitute regulation under Government control for the free play of market forces, we must be prepared to continue the work of regimentation by superimposing codes upon codes. The process doesn't stop with display of a Blue Eagle.

Fishermen's Relief.

Atlantic Coast and Great Lakes fishermen are conducting an organized survey to ascertain the amount of money necessary to equip themselves for spring activity. This old American industry has asked less from the Government than almost any other. There has been no "farm relief for fishermen," despite the extreme hardships encountered because of the depression and unusual weather conditions this winter.

Now the fisher folk hope to get the Government to underwrite new nets and trawls, coats of paint and engine repairs, which constitute their biggest expense. When the information as to costs is assembled it will be sent to the Administration in the hope that its ingenuity—and experience—will find the funds.

It will be interesting to watch the outcome. Will the requests of the fisher folk be granted, or will they be told that the way out of depression is to curtail rather than increase production? Most fishermen agree that the prices they have received for their catches recently are so low that little is lost by staying safe in harbor. But they are an independent race, to whom the ambition of protracted leisure at Government expense does not come easily.

If the Government wants to secure the largest amount of taxes out of whisky drinking, why doesn't it slap a 50 per cent tax on aspirin?

Gen. Johnson used the clause, "if I may be permitted to lapse into the vernacular." Lapse?

So long, Mr. Insull—Abyssinia.

What Does Labor Want?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that so much ill-wind is blowing through the labor world, I believe it is time for thoughtful men to stop, ponder, and ask: "What do the labor leaders really want?"

While American labor leaders deserve great credit for bringing labor out of virtual slavery to heights of great luxury and modern comfort, undreamed of 50 years ago, there is danger, in their present attitude, of undoing much of their past good work, and killing the goose which lays the golden egg.

Don't the labor leaders realize that labor can not get along without capital any more than the latter can get along without labor, and, for the best results, and good of all, both must work in peace and harmony?

From present indication, considering the heroic efforts of our Government, the milleninum for labor is just around the corner. Is labor willing to use common sense and take advantage of the same?

Small Enterprises.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of a news article by Harden Colfax recently published in The Post on "Small Enterprises," I agree that the small enterprise is fundamental in the entire scheme for National recovery.

The NRA is for big people and big industries. The farm help plan is so red-taped with big interests the small appeal gets nowhere. But recovery for the small enterprise, we now take it, is to be managed by a "small industries service committee." If this committee can plan a way to get the small industry in the small town in operation once more, to get the old hands back to work, prosperity will automatically commence to function. But there is a vital question that they will have to tackle—the question of markets. Will it be possible with the revival of small factories and plants to find a market for the products they offer the public?

If the committee could get the small enterprises to be "going concerns," it would be a success for the New Deal that would thrill the Nation, because it would be bettering the condition and the outlook and prospects of the small business people, who are, in the end, the mainstay of the Nation. Redistribution of Wealth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Haven't the New Dealers, in their zeal for establishing an autocratic, benevolent society for dispensing largess taken from others and distributed "with the compliments of the New Deal," overlooked a rich opportunity to rid their utterances of the tinge of hypocrisy?

I never have envied those who have more than I; have thought the world a much more interesting place because not all lives revolved in the same small orbit as my own. But I think that those who profess to believe in the redistribution of wealth should distribute some of their own, lest we to whom luxury is unknown choke with the bitter cynicism that their words arouse.

Safer Drugs and Cosmetics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During June of last year Senator Copeland introduced a bill in the upper house which would revise and replace the present pure food and drugs act. A strong opposition has arisen against the bill. Common sense tells us, despite anything the opposition may say to the contrary, that under the new bill self-medication can be practiced with greater ease, greater benefit, and therefore with greater economy than ever before by the elimination from the market of fraudulent and dangerous drugs. If for no other reason than to allow milady to improve on nature's handiwork without fear of dangerous consequences, I advocate that the bill be passed.

We, the drug and cosmetic-buying public, have everything in the world to gain by the passing of this bill, so why not all of us get behind it and strive for its passage?

Air Mail and the Army.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt's Administration has been severely criticized for rebuking Col. Lindbergh's letter of protest, criticizing the cancellation of air mail contracts.

Col. Lindbergh was asked by Secretary Dern to serve on a committee to investigate Army aviation, but he refused on the grounds that for the Army to carry the mail was "unwarranted and contrary to American principles." Being an Army Reserve officer, knowing his testimony would do much to improve the Army's equipment and to eliminate many of the dangerous weak spots, thereby strengthening this Nation's defense for or against war, Lindbergh deliberately refused to serve on this committee. He is said to have his heart and soul in aviation, yet he leans toward the cilivian corps, instead of being impartial as he should be if he is as true to aviation as he claims.

Necessity is a dear teacher. Let us not ignore the deaths of those valiant ones that did their best, but develop our aviation to a higher level. GUS SHINSKE.

Vote for Mrs. Sanger!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Puerto Rico, area 3,435 square miles, is about the size of two average American counties. When we took it over in 1899, it had 953,243 very poor people. We drained, we "sanitated," doctored and taught, and in 1930 the island had 1,543,913 persons, still very poor. Our gracious First Lady, no doubt, will have valuable suggestions to offer, and Gov. Winship certainly has plans for the improvement of conditions. These will be put into effect and the result will be that in 1945 the island will have 2,000,000 people, who will be poorer and hungrier than ever. To revert to Spanish methods of laissez faire in sanitation is unthinkable, so the only worthwhile alternative is to send Mrs. Margaret Sanger to San Juan as governor. H. B.

Call for F. E. Richards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your correspondents' column on Sunday, March 11, there appeared a letter, carrying a Jackson, Miss., date line, signed "F. E. Richards," claiming or proclaiming his democracy and that of his forbears, severely criticizing the Roosevelt Administration.

Being a native of that soil, I wrote to Maj. Fredrick Sullens, the editor of the Jackson Daily News, one of the most widely known newspapermen in the South, asking him to check up on the aforesaid "F. E. Richards," and tell us something about him, as he was something out of the ordinary for a Democrat of that section with a long line of Democratic ancestors.

Maj. Sullens writes me: "The city directory and telephone directory fail to disclose any person bearing the name of F. E. Richards." Why, therefore, answer some person who probably does not exist? HENRY PEYTON.

New Deal or Square Deal?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To buck and bounce the veterans in the name of economy may have had, as a slogan, a stirring suggestion of both courage and unflinching economy, but, when applied as it has been, it's economic virtue has been far outweighed by ungenerous severity and by an altogether too obvious determination on the part of the Government to shirk it's legitimate responsibility for the well-being of men who, in years past, fought its battles at home and overseas! Such hard-boiled zeal on behalf of an impersonal "budget" at the expense of many well-deserving citizens speedily lost its appeal, not only to the indignant veterans but to hosts of other citizens who insist that our New Deal be square as well as new!

"The Uncorrected Blunder."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you most emphatically for your superb editorial, "The Uncorrected Blunder." It is by far the most manfully enunciated opinion on a government's abominable act I have ever read. I honor you, sir! B. LOUDUN.

As Others See It

Are We Tired of War?

Francois Guizot, historian and statesman who held the portfolio of foreign affairs and the ostensible rank of prime minister in France from 1840 to 1848, devoted much of the energy of his administration to the preservation of peace between England and France. Guizot was a pacifist, though a confirmed materialist.

His theories respecting the psychology of influences which lead nations into war or incline them toward peace are of interest again today when the kettles of National conflict are simmering over much of Europe and when the optimism of those who deplore war finds its expression in the declaration that a real outbreak is inconceivable because the world is "tired of war."

As a professor of history at the Sorbonne, Guizot lectured on the crusades. "It has been oft repeated that Europe was tired of continually invading Asia," he said. "This expression appears to me exceedingly incorrect.

"It is not possible that human beings can be wearied with what they have not done—that labors of their forefathers can fatigue them.

"Weariness is a personal, not an inherited feeling. The men of the thirteenth century were not fatigued by the crusades of the twelfth. They were influenced by another cause. A great change had taken place in ideas, sentiments and social conditions. The same desires and the same wants were no longer felt. The same things were no longer believed. The people refused to believe what their ancestors were persuaded of."

Guizot believed, then, that individuals may tire of war in which they have participated personally. If enough individuals have been engaged, a whole generation might weary of war. But nations do not. Nor does the world. A change must take place in ideas and there must come a rejection of the beliefs of ancestors who have sought war or accepted war as inescapable, if posterity of those same ancestors is to be spared from war.

How much change has taken place in our own ideas? We have joined with other nations in the erection of a structure of peace agreements, but how do we react to the age-old platitude that great armies and navies are the best guarantors of the peace? How calmly do we look outward across either of our border oceans?

The Saloon Evil

Postoffice, Friday.

We have received a letter from our friend the Major and do not quite know what to do about it. The Major's attitude toward life may best be indicated by saying that he is violently opposed to non-service connected disability pensions.

Now, his letter is too long to publish in its entirety. Also there are passages wherein the writer's emotions overcome his discretion. Yet he has influence in the home town where we hope to round out our career, such as it is.

Perhaps, he will let us off gently if we quote only the more gentle portions of his communication and adumbrate the others.

• • • •

He writes us from Manhattan, where he has gone for a visit. New York is not his native State; his enemies—of whom he boasts many—say that his native State is one of exhilaration. Anyhow, the Major does not tolerate the condition which he observes along the Hudson.

• • • •

He writes:

"During the era of prohibition, I labored sincerely in the cause of personal liberty, combating the curse of sumptuary legislation by both precept and example, sometimes at no small danger of arrest, often at unregarded risk to my health. Out of no pride do I state these facts—I only did my duty, was only one of thousands. I mention the matter so as to prove that I have no preconceived prejudices in what I have next to say . . .

"Well, now we have won our cause. Liquor is back. You can buy it openly everywhere I travel except Maine, which first voted for Federal repeal, then clapped a State prohibition act on its own head. Generally speaking, the institution of the saloon is with us once again.

"I want to protest against the Saloon Evil.

"The old saloon had its faults, I admit. So had the ice cream parlor. So have we all. But it was, on the whole, a pleasant place, and it did not have the cardinal fault of the post-prohibition saloon.

"Nor am I complaining of the new saloon's liquor. It is more medicinal than stimulating; in Washington lately I bought a bottle marked 'Blended' and have not yet found a chemist that can tell me where the whisky is in it or what the blends are. Still, there was considerable bad stuff served of old.

"No, sir; that is not the distinctive fault of the New Deal saloon. Today, or I should say tonight, the saloon evil is woman. . . ."

• • • •

It appears that the Major had not seen women in bar rooms until he reached New York. It appears through several pages of his letter. He finally proceeds:

"Time was when the saloon was the home of harmony. But women's voices are notoriously untuned to those chords best fitted for the bar room. They are spoiled by the soprano note. Can any one with a sensitive ear imagine a feminine throat succeeding with 'Sweet Adeline?' Well, the feminine intruders either do not realize this inhibition and so, joining a chorus, ruin the melody, or else they do realize it and ruin the melody by silent sneers . . .

• • • •

"During its previous existence, the saloon was a temple of humor. But woman has no sense of humor—at least of the bar-room type of humor. She comes in, and laughter fades to silence, the merry jest dies upon the humid lips, the anecdote commits suicide. Since I first patronized a saloon open to women, I have not heard one paragraph beginning 'That reminds me' or 'That's like the fellow who.' . . .

• • • •

"In its original purity, the saloon was the (male) people's forum. It was the one place where nonchurchgoing men would discuss religion, the one place where voters would discuss political theory.

"Now, if you please, this also is endangered by the feminine invasion. Not content with robbing us of innocent song, unsatisfied by wresting from us our little pleasantries, women would now deny us freedom of political speech; they even attempt to filch our religion.

"What woman has brought to the modern bar is a nonvisible gag-rule especially devised against every debate-inclined drinker; a gag-rule that is enforced through mere selfish chatter on their own part.

"And why?

"Because, if you please, women, whether churchgoers or atheists, accept religion as something static and settled. Because, also, ever since she got the vote, woman has not only ceased to be interested in political theory, talk politics: She also doesn't want anybody else to be interested. . . ."

The major is rather strong after this point. We shan't accompany him farther in his ravings. We shall, instead, risk misinterpretation by passing to his conclusion.

"In short," he terminates, "in its pristine form, the saloon was popularly and rightly called the Poor Man's Club. Man's—not woman's. But now that woman has been allowed to enter, she has completely taken possession. She has altered her permit of admission until it reads like an eviction notice.

"What," asks the major (who is a bachelor), "are we going to do about the saloon evil?"

The major, of course, is an extreme misogynist. But is he not fumbling for an important truth in suggesting that there are limitations to the doctrine of equal rights. Limitations which go deeper, even, than issues of delicacy and good taste?

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

THERE was one outstanding fact that could have hardly escaped Mr. Roosevelt's notice yesterday when he conferred with the representatives of the automobile employes, and that was they are not radicals. The employers may think and say that it is a radical movement that has come to disturb their serenity. Radical influences may be traced to many individuals on the Government pay rolls here in Washington, but not to those fellows who appeared at the White House.

BARGERON.

They impressed those who saw them as very clean-cut and for the most part intelligent young men. They appeared so young, in fact, that one reporter was prompted to ask if the automobile industry had come to be a young man's job.

• • • •

Neither are they professional American Federation of Labor men. They are or were, until many of them were discharged, workers in the automobile industry and undoubtedly just as loyal as any workers the employers had. My guess is, in fact, that they were the outstanding workers of the plants; that is to say, fellows who stood out in intelligence and ambition above the rest.

Most likely the great majority of them have families and homes and are looked upon as substantial fellows in the neighborhood in which they live. If there is an agitator among them or a "disgruntled" employe, he did not appear in the group of smiling and genial fellows that visited the White House.

This is, of course, the story of every movement of this kind.

• • • •

When the United States Government said to the American Federation of Labor, in effect: "Go in and organize the automobile industry, it is your right," the federation sent the rough and ready William Collins to act as its representative. Collins is the typical organizer, undoubtedly what the employers would call an inciter. But he does not appear to be an unreasonable man.

Well, naturally the first thing he tried to do was to interest the fellows who stood out among the others, the ones with more ability, who because of their personalities, were popular with their associates. Very likely some of these men turned him down because of fear. Others with more courage accepted the assignment of organizing their particular plant or group.

After all, wasn't there a guarantee from the United States Government that it was perfectly all right?

• • • •

I would venture to say that those men at the White House yesterday were about the most efficient in the industry and the most reliable. It is paradoxical in these great movements to alleviate human misery or to provide, as the present Administration campaigners say, "a more abundant life," that such fellows as these are the ones who get hooked.

There is another thing to be borne in mind, too. These young men tend to belie the employers' statement that their objection to unionization is because their plants "would be run from Washington." These same young men would be the dominant labor influences in their plants under the A. F. L. set-up. And they are, or were, employes.

• • • •

Personally, I have never been able to see why the Administration had to build up such a monster as the NRA, which got it into its present mess. But there is no indication that it intends to tear the thing down. Consequently, these young men and their followers should be protected if it is the last thing the Government ever does. This is, in fact, essential if our respect for government is to be preserved and we are not to return to the racketeering that accompanied the unenforcement of the eighteenth amendment.

A way out, of course, would be to have these men restored to employment and let the automobile manufacturers withdraw from the code. That would not hurt anybody but Crack-Down Johnson. He would have a fit.

Marker to Honor French 1776 Army

Unveiling to Be Tomorrow at Pilgrims' Church.

A memorial marker to French troops who crossed Rock Creek to join Washington's Continental Army at Yorktown will be unveiled at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Church of the Pilgrims by the District of Columbia historical committee of the D. A. R., of which Mrs. Arturo Y. Casanova is chairman.

A musical program will be in charge of the State chairman, Mrs. Ralph Barnard, and Howard E. Severe. A salute to the flag will follow.

Climax will be a historical sketch given by Mrs. S. H. McCrory. The marker will be unveiled by Mrs. Casanova and Arturo Casanova 3d, and presented to the historian general, Mrs. Louis William Dunne, by the State regent, Mrs. Harry F. Colfax Grove. A representative of the French Legation will attend.

Loan of $4,500,000 To B. & O. Approved

Contract for a Public Works Administration loan of $4,500,000 to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was signed yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, he announced.

The loan, one of three announced, will enable the railroad to spend $5,484,000 this year for equipment and repars. Approximately 240 locomotives and 5,000 freight cars are to be repaired, some of the work to be done in the Cumberland (Md.) shops of the company.

Laura Ingalls Terms Andes Hop "Joy Ride"

Buenos Aires, March 22 (AP). Laura Ingalls, diminutive New York aviatrix, rested today after her "magnificent joy ride" over the Andes yesterday. She was the first American woman flier to make the hop solo.

The aviatrix said she should return by Rio de Janeiro within a day or two, but "I may let myself be persuaded to stay longer if I can do more flying around this immense airport called Argentina."

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

A SESSION of arm-chair traveling last night has left me limp today. Four or five months in the islands off Honduras among ticks, sharks, sulphurous swamps, hurrcanes and descendants of Morgan the pirate—three years in the African veldt, flavored with quinine and kudu steak, among Barotese boys and lions moaning outside the kraal at night—and I'm ready to rest my feet.

I've discovered that in the Caribbean the spiders are brown and hairy and in Africa pink and naked, that in both places some people like to pick up scorpions and put them on their bare chests, and that there's nothing to the old saw of woman being the weaker vessel. Miss Houlson and Mrs. Hubbard could, in that phrase which is a marvel of economy, take it and like it.

• • • •

"I must say the first taste of "Blue Blaze" (Bobbs-Merrill, $3) by Jane Harvey Houlson tended slightly to pucker the mouth. A studio photograph of a lady explorer in boots and puttees, holding a rifle and gazing wistfully off to the left-hand bank of lights, does not induce credibility. When I read that she "always adored ships," that such and so "intrigued" her "immensely," that she "repaired" to the hotel and a highball was "indicated," I tell you I feared the worst.

But I soon forgot all that in the little 45-footer going from Honduras to the Isles de la Báhia. Miss Houlson and her chief of 12 years standing, F. A. Mitchell-Hedges, were off to look for Indian remains and anything else that might pop up. The expedition had the weighty backing of museums, yet it was anything but solemn. It was a grand lark, with a hardy and jovial gang of cut-throats for company.

Joe was "the deadliest killer in Central America," and he took Jane and the chief all over the islands, as kindly and honest as you please. Charlie, the Mexican cook, had killed 18 men, but no one was more loyal. The natives on Bonaca, proud descendants of the pirates and captured Spanish ladies, gave all-night dances for the expedition and proved the best of friends. Yet they kept knives and guns handy. The Honduranans had long since given up the effort to rule them. Even among themselves their code was so strict that if any man so much as kissed a woman, without the most honorable intentions, he was found dead the next day.

The book is not burdened with ethnological discovery. They found quantities of pre-historic pottery, and in one place an arrangement of monoliths precisely like that in Cornwall—which is an item for the Atlantis theory. But "Blue Blaze" is almost wholly the story of little adventures, of harpooning deathmeeting beachcomber Americans and child-like Indians, of pushing up stagnant creeks and stumbling over iguanas. Miss Houlson tells it with a sprightliness which is deceiving, for a lot of it was hard and dangerous work. But the spirit in ehr 98 pounds made it seem like a picnic.

There is far more struggle and need for grit in Margaret Carson Hubbard's "No One to Blame: An African Adventure" (Minton Balch, $3). She and her husband, with a year-old child and another soon to arrive, took up animal farming in Northern Rhodesia. They lived in mud huts, grass-roofed, with army ants crossing the floor, a baby cheetah in the corner, and a baby wart-hog rushing in and out. They were 5 miles from the railroad (three trains a week), and 18 hours from a doctor. Here her child was born, to grow up with his brother under the care of loyal Barotse boys—a group which will earn your respect for the African native. Here she was left to run the place when her husband went off after elephants.

A friend at home offered to back them in taking movies of wild life. They gave up the farm, packed up a safari, and went off on a heartbreaking three weeks into Portuguese East Africa—the children carried in slings. When they made a permanent camp they were bothered by lions, native Portugese police, mutiny, and a shortage of food. Malaria hit them and they nearly died. Expected funds failed to arrive. The whole venture had to be given up (a foreword tells us they went back again two years later and succeeded) and they got out of the country by the skin of their teeth.

"No One to Blame" is a strangely moving tale. The little domestic arrangements in the midst of the never-to-be-dulled excitements of of the African veldt gave me a deeper feeling of adventure than any hard-bitten explorer's narrative. Mrs. Hubbard had to watch the children's milk and keep an eye open for lions. Most people would be satisfied with one of those at a time.

Kings and Queens in Verse.

One way to remember the monarchs of England in their regular order is to learn the following bit of verse that some one composed in the ninteenth century.

The Sovereigns of England.

First, William the Norman,
Then William his son;
Henry, Stephen and Henry,
Then Richard and John.
Next Henry the third
Edwards, one, two and three;
And again, after Richard,
Three Henrys we see.
Two Edwards, third Richard,
If rightly I guess;
Two Henrys, sixth Edward,
Queen Mary, Queen Bess;
Then Jamie, the Scotchman,
Then Charles, whom they slew,
Yet received, after Cromwell,
Another Charles too,
Next Jamie the second
Ascended the throne;
Then good William and Mary
Together came on;
Then Anne, Georges four,
And fourth William all passed
And Victoria came—
May she long be the last.

To which we may add the two following lines:

King Edward came nex';
Now George V is Rex.

Of all the monarchs of England, one of the best was King Edward I, one of the worst was King John, one of the most inefficient was King Stephen. Observe that there has never been a second Stephen, or a second John, or a fourth Richard. Only the other day the little skeletons of King Edward V and of his brother were discovered; they had been murdered in 1483, and the size of their frames proved that it was not King Henry the Seventh, but Richard III who had killed them.

The use of the word "last" for Victoria, in the line "May she long be the last," shows the unfortunate ambiguity of that word, when it is used for "latest." An author met a friend on the street, and asked, "Have you read my last book?" to which his friend replied, "I hope so."

As a matter of fact, when I was a boy, it was commonly said in America that Victoria would be the last monarch of England; the country was so democratic that when she died, it would become a republic. History laughs at prophecy. The Emperor of Russia, the Emperor of Austria, the King of Prussia lost their positions; whereas today King George of England is more firmly seated on his throne than any preceding monarch in his country's history. He is the most popular man in Great Britain and in the whole empire.

When the Prince of Wales succeeded Victoria, many thought he would call himself King Albert; but he kept up the continuity of British royalty by taking the name King Edward VII.

House Group Puts Army Sleuth On Trail of Alleged Air Fraud

Search of Records Ordered to Find Who Altered Purchase System.

An Army colonel has been put to work as a special sleuth to track down alleged irregularities in Army airplane buying, the Associated Press says.

Chairman Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, of the House Military Sub-committee, said yesterday that if the evidence found by the committee's special investigator disclosed a need for further study, the committee then will accept the proffered aid of the Justice Department.

The special investigator is Col. M. G. Spinks, of the Army inspector general's office. He is concentrating on personal as well as official War Department records.

The committee contends the 1926 aircraft defense act clearly ordered competitive bidding, but that a few months after it became a law, someone—either a civilian or an Army officer—ordered, in effect, that the law be disregarded and airplanes bought on negotiated contracts.

After establishing responsibility for that order, the committee intends to determine whether the individual obtained any personal profit.

Rogers clearly indicated that the search for evidence might soon extend to Wright Field, at Dayton, Ohio, where the Army's airplane procurement officers are stationed.

Ickes Is Worried By Oil Situation

Chaotic Prices Laid to California Surplus.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday declared that he viewed the alleged chaotic condition of the oil industry with considerable apprehension.

Ickes pointed out that crude oil is now selling on the California market for as low as 40 cents a barrel, a price he declared "unthinkable." He attributed the unsettled price condition to failure of the Pacific Coast oil cartel to go into effect.

The cartel was held up when the Department of Justice objected to its terms.

U. S. to Probe Relief Protest From Wierton

Delegation Asks Company Blue Eagle Be Taken Away at Once.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration yesterday ordered an investigation at Wierton, W. Va., when steel union representatives came to Washington and charged local relief officials were controlled by the Wierton Steel Co., and were discriminating against strikers.

After laying complaints before Aubrey Williams, assistant relief administrator, the delegation lodged a demand with William H. Davis, compliance director of NRA, that the Wierton Steel Co.'s Blue Eagle be taken away.

The Wierton workers told Williams that families in Wierton were receiving as little as 30 cents a week relief. Records of the Relief Administration showed that the relief rate for West Virginia should be $8.60 cents a month.

Investigation Ordered.

Williams said he was ordering William N. Beehler, West Virginia State relief administrator, to make an investigation into relief affairs at Wierton immediately. From Davis the delegation extracted a promise that he would at once take up the question of revoking the Wierton company's Blue Eagle.

The surprise visit of the Wierton delegation at National relief headquarters added another chapter to the stormy Wierton Steel Co. struggle with NRA.

Principal charges laid before Williams by the delegation, which was headed by William J. Long, were that relief workers in the steel town are openly sympathetic to the Wierton company, and are "class conscious."

They asserted that when relief workers found any one on strike, they immediately practiced discrimination. They asserted 600 families were being discriminated against.

Appeal to Hopkins.

The delegation presented an open letter addressed to Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, asserting that "In Wierton, the company-controlled relief officials are using their power over Federal relief funds to starve our people into submission to the company, which is defying the Governmcnt on all sides.

"Either you have not authorized adequate relief for Wierton," the letter said after reciting that only 30 cents a week was being paid, "or the company-controlled relief officials are withholding that money from the men locked out."

The letter asked that Hopkins specify the prope. amount to be paid families in West Virginia; that he remove guilty officials, and appoint a committee of union workers to help administer Federal funds. It was signed by Long, Mel Moore, Jake Entinger, Charles Anderson, Charles Greenwood, William Milstead, T. I. Lewis and Jack Reese, who said they were Wierton workers and still were on the firm's pay roll.

SPRING EXAM IN THE MATRIMONIAL COURSE.

(Connecticut College for Women has a course in marriage. It includes premarital problems, adjustments of married life, &c.—News item.)

1—Is marriage necessarily a handicap to true love and understanding, and if not, why does it seem so most of the time?

2—Is it advisable for a girl to master a good trade or profession before she considers matrimony, and does the failure to do this indicate a lack of foresight?

3—Is the discovery that he plays golf a sufficient reason for a woman to reject a man as a husband and companion?

4—Do men with money make better husbands than men without money, or is it better to have one of each?

• • • •

5—In the long run, which will find the greater domestic happiness, the girl who knows four languages, holds three college degrees and has all the social graces, or a girl who never burns the eggs, can make a good pot of coffee five out of seven mornings and has a little money of her own?

6—Name four great husbands of history and state why it happened that they were all military men or explorers who weren't home much.

7—Before marriage should both parties have a clear understanding on the following points:

(a) Which is the better system, the Culbertson or Lenz?

(b) Are cigarette ashes good for rugs or not?

(c) If a wife drives the car, should she be willing to change the tire?

(d) Should green peppers be put into coleslaw without the consent of the consumer?

(e) Must a husband always be bound to answer the question, "Lester, am I as fat as that woman over there?"

• • • •

8—Write an essay describing the relative importance of the following factors as major causes of divorce:

(a) Back-seat driving.
(b) Bridge.
(c) Airing the dog.
(d) Unexplained presence of strange perfume on coat.
(e) Inability to locate anything in the medicine cabinet.
(f) Dinner with an old schoolgirl acquaintance.

10—What, if anything, should cause a girl to reject a suitor more quickly than the discovery that he drives a motorcycle with sidecar attached? That he sleeps with his mouth open That he wants to do card tricks whenever he has a few drinks?

11—Are congenial couples happy or do they find it more monotonous than if they threw things occasionally?

Bill Permitting Russians Here To Stay Urged

Deporting 4,000 Royalists Would Mean Execution, Committee Told.

(Associated Press.)

Pleas that Congress save thousands of Russian royalists here from possible deportation and consequent death or Siberian exile, were heard yesterday by the House Immigration Committee.

Mrs. Irene Mishtowt, of here, whose husband was a naval attache of the Russian Embassy here under the Czars, urged the committee to save the Russians who came into the United States on League of Nations and students' passports and are now here illegally.

"If they are deported back to Russia now," she said, "they will be sentenced to death or to internment camps which would be the next thing to death."

Mrs. Mishtowt and other witnesses favored passage of the Bacon bill to permit Russian political refugees who entered illegally to remain. Daniel W. MacCormack, Commissioner of Immigration, said it would affect about 4,000 persons. He also favored the measure.

Dr. Paul S. Galtsoff, senior biologist in the Bureau of Fisheries, claiming for the refugees' high moral character, said he presumed "their lives would be in great danger," adding:

"Very likely they would be sent to camps in the Arctic region or Siberia to carry out certain projects with forced labor in the U. S. S. R."

Galtsoff said he was in the Russian army and came to the United States in 1921. He is now an American citizen.

Drop in Imports Of Liquor Shown

$4,765,000 as Value of February Purchases.

The value of wine and liquor imported during February was shown by Department of Commerce figures yesterday to have been less than in January or December, the Associated Press reported.

The February total was $4,765,000 against $5,015,000 in January and $6,690,000 in December. These figures do not include imports for entry into bonded warehouses.

Whisky was the most important import item in February. The United Kingdom was the largest supplier with Canada second. Whisky imports totaled 410,730 gallons. France continued to rank as the most important source of still and sparkling wines and brandies.

Garner Supports Senator Connally

Will Vote for Incumbent Over Bailey, He Says.

Vice President Garner yesterday said he will vote for Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, for renomination over his opponent, Representative Bailey (Democrat), Texas, the Associated Press reports.

After a White House visit Bailey said he offered to withdraw from the race if President Roosevelt desired, but he added he still was a candidate. Garner declared:

"I merely make the statement I am going to vote for Connally. I am not authorized to speak for the Administration unless I am asked to."

New Interior Building Site Is Kept Secret

Planning Group Approves G.P.O. Expansion, Army Barracks.

The National Capitol Park and Planning Commission decided yesterday on its choice of a site for the new Interior Department Building, but declined to disclose it. Unless the commission has veered from past sentiment, its recommendation to Secretary Ickes will call for a building in the vicinity of New York and Virginia avenues northwest.

Expansion of the Government Printing Office into the block on North Capitol street between G and H, directly opposite the present plant, was approved. The planning group also favored building of a military barracks near Naval Hospital.

Appointment of a director of the proposed recreation survey and discussion of several bills pending in Congress were deferred so the commission could make a field trip to Fort Foote, Md. Plans are under way to build a highway from the District line to the abandoned Army post as a link in the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

The commission inspected work in progress at Bolling Field, Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, scheduled to be repaired or replaced, and the site of the proposed East Capitol street stadium and armory. The meeting will be continued today and possibly tomorrow.

Extradition of Alleged Girl Swindler Asked

Jefferson City, Mo., March 22 (AP). A request for extradition of Betty Jackson from London, Ontario, on a charge of obtaining $4,250 from Miss Lucy B. Taylor, of Hallsville, Mo., by false pretenses, involving an alleged promise to obtain release of the latter's brother from the Kansas State Prison, was sent to Secretary Hull today.

Miss Taylor said Miss Jackson made representations that she could obtain a pardon for George Taylor, the convict, but needed $5,000 for expenses."

Wampas Baby Star List Has 36 Candidates

Los Angeles, March 22 (AP).—Miriam Jordan, of England, and Muriel Kirkland, who was born in New Rochelle, N. Y., were nominated today as candidates for Wampas baby stardom by the Wampas board of directors. Both are free lance motion picture players.

This swelled the list of candidates to 36. Wampas, the studio publicists' organization, will select 13 at a banquet Tuesday night.

Billie Possum Gets a Job

BLACKIE BEAR had eaten pumpkin pie and catfish stew and fried chicken and lots of other good things, but never till that Christmas day had he tasted ice cream, and he was sure it was the best thing he had ever eaten, unless it was Aunt Judy's fruit cake. He just couldn't leave that fruit cake behind. When Billie went off to get the milk for Christmas he didn't tell Blackie where he got it; he just said that a friend gave it to him.

After Christmas, Blackie went back to eating rabbits and fishes and such other things as he could get, but he kept thinking about that ice cream. Every time he saw Billie, he would ask him where he got the milk, but Billie would tease him and just grin and say, "From a friend of mine."

"Just the cream of the land," Billie said.

Near Mrs. Moo Cows.

Billie's new house was right in the edge of Mrs. Moo Cow's pasture, and he could sit in his door and see Mrs. Moo Cow every day while she was eating her dinner. And that's how they became acquainted, and made that agreement to trade milk for persimmons. So Billie had every bit of milk he could drink, and so didn't have to do much hunting, since he ate all the persimmons he wanted when he was shaking them down for Mrs. Moo Cow. And milk and persimmons will keep any possum out of the graveyard.

And now Billie was getting mighty fat and lazy, and Blackie noticed it, and wondered what sort of good things he was having to eat. "Just the cream of the land," Billie said, "just the cream of the land."

But Billie wasn't afraid that Blackie would ever go to Mrs. Moo Cow for milk, since she lived in the field where Mr. Man made Blackie haul wood. Billie knew that Blackie wouldn't go to that field for anything in the world.

Blackie Rather Spoiled.

Blackie had always managed to get 'most everything he wanted, sooner or later, by keeping on working for it, and he expected to keep working on Billie Possum till he got him to bring some more milk. Every time he said anything to Billie about it, Billie would just grin and say: "Well, I'll see about it."

One day when Blackie just could not stand it any longer, he asked Billie what he would charge to bring him some milk every day. Billie scratched his head and pulled his whiskers, and looked mighty wise for a few minutes before he spoke.

You know Billie had just moved to his new house, and he didn't have much furniture in it, and no rugs at all. And he thought of how good some nice, soft rabbit skins would feel to his feet when he got out of his bed on cold mornings, so he told Blackie that he would give him a bucket of milk for every rabbit skin he would get for him. So Blackie started in to catching rabbits, and no dog could have caught more of them than he did. So for about two weeks Blackie had milk or ice cream 'most every day, and then something happened.

BUT THERE ARE NO RULES NOW.

These are days when Big Jim Farley's experience as chairman of the New York State fight commission must come in rather handy in Washington.

Winston Guest, famous polo star, has entered New York politics as a dollar-a-year man. If there ever was an opportunity for a good 10-goal political leader in New York this is the time.

Primo Carnera and Max Baer are to fight for the heavyweight championship. The signing of Baer marks the first time a promotor has ever had to make an offer for the fighting rights to a motion picture star.

Radio Waves and Ripples

THIS spring, and the season of commencements and class reunions is not far off.

Close at hand, too, is the time for Charlie Austin to bless and turn loose upon unsuspecting and unguided tourists another crop of young men versed in the lore of the Capital's embassies, its public buildings and its statues.

Charlie, in other words, is getting ready to graduate another class from his School for Sightseeing Bus Spielers. But Charlie is not the sort of man to take such an occasion lightly, to put the boys on the pay roll and let it go at that. Charlie likes a little formality with his graduations. And in WJSV Manager Harry Butcher he has found a kindred spirit.

So Saturday, instead of calling the boys together—there are 20 in the class this year—and making them a little speech in private, Charlie will take them into one of WJSV's studios where he and Announcer Bob Trout will put them through 15 minutes of what you might call a commencement exercise.

Of course, it's a WJSV program, 6:45 to 7 p. m., and there'll be no time for a reunion of old grads, but Charlie can't help feeling that he's sending the boys out into the world in a way they'll remember.

COLUMBIA'S publicity department has just sent us a statement which explains everything about Col. Stoopnagle and Budd's theme song. It seems that a lot of people have been asking about it, most of them requesting them to stop playing it.

The statement was prepared by the colonel's greatuncle, Franzuel G. Lisxtnagle, chief zither player to the court of Kleptomania, and probably if you'll read it you'll stop feeling so badly about that theme song.

"It's a mistake," wrote the colonel's notorious uncle, "to regard Col. Stoopnagle and Budd's theme song as music. It is an even greater mistake to play it. This remarkable composition consists of just six notes, three going down, and curiously enough the same three notes coming up. The old refrain is popularly referred as 'I Love Coffee, I Love Tea' with the majestic counter melody, 'I Love the Girls, the Girls Love Me.' Actually these six notes—a dominant ninth in deadly combat with a minor triad—form an old choral cantata by Johannuel Sebastian Q. Bachnagle, entitled 'Ich Liebe Kaffe, Ich Liebe The, Ich Liebe die Maedchen und sie Lieben Mich.' (Edition Dumkoff und Rosenwasser. opus 40, pocue 71, Gumdropaam-Kiser, Schnackenfeld, Pomerania.)

"THIS tone poem, if I may call it such, is in six connected notes and presents a complete story of my life. Each note was filched from one of the great masterworks. The first note, C as in cat, was lifted bodily from Bachnagle's twenty-ninth symphony when the composer wasn't looking. The second was passed by a confidence man in West Branch, Iowa. The third note was collected by the insurance company and the other three notes were taken up by the bank.

"We hear: (1) The furtive lure of the Stoopnosphere, full of mocking ecstasy and the distant croaking of night birds; (2) the entrance of the tender puissant hero—the mighty Eaglestoop; (3) the Eaglestoop's adversaries; (4) the Eaglestoop's courtship; (5) the Eaglestoop's battlefield; (6) the Eaglestoop's release from the world—followed by a brief obituary from Budd.

"As we listen to the Stoopendous Stoopnagle stalk over thestoopboard of the mighty gaspipe organ, we see emerge from the East River mists the figure of Budd the Beloved, disdainfully watching the fluttering Eaglestoop trying to thread a needle. A single mighty note—if the organ works—proclaims at last his victory. And yet the Eaglestoop exults alone—the world regards his conquest with cold and cynical indifference. But even as the last note dies away peace descends upon the lonely spirit of the Stoopnagle. The finale, majestic and serene, recalls Stoopnagle's own mournful prophecy: 'Far Budd, my theme song is a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, and signifying nothing.'"

The next time you want a lot about nothing just let us know and we'll write Uncle Franguel.

When N. B. C. assigned James Wilkinson, Three Maids and a Mike and the Willie Green Hayshakers, to help out with the National Press Club's entertainment for the Byrd expedition Sunday night, it gave them, incidentally, their first crack at a network broadcast.

In addition to being short-waved to the Admiral and his boys at Little America, the program is going to a Nation-wide N. B. C. chain.

William C. Murphy, jr., press club president, will broadcast a greeting. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt has been selected as the principal speaker, with Strickland Gillilan as master of ceremonies.

WMAL has asked the Federal Radio Commission for permission to rebuild its transmitter.

If the commission approves, WMAL hopes to be able to improve reception throughout its signal area.

The only sufferers, apparently, will be the engineers, who will have to stay up until after the station goes off the air to make the installations.

The milling company that made the late Columbia News Service a self-sustaining enterprise has bought an hour on the same chain tomorrow night to see what a revue with people like Helen Morgan, Jean Sargent, Helen Boderick and Everett Marshall can do in the way of increased sales. They're off at 10:45 p. m., on 82 stations, including Washington's WJSV.

Italy America Society Gives Harp Concert

Mme. Edythe M. Brosius Presents Program at Meeting.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The meetings of the Italy America Society of Washington are among the most interesting and most cultural events in Capital society.

The Washington branch of the society was founded several years ago. Concerts, lectures, and occasionally a dance, are given at the meetings which in the early years of the society were held at the homes of members, but for the past two years have been held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Last evening a musicale was given by the society at the Mayflower. Mr. Walter F. Davidge, president of the society, received the members and their guests in the Chinese room, where, after the musicale, a buffet supper was served.

Program by Mme. Brosius.

The program was given by Mme. Edythe Marmion Brosius, harpist, and the National Concert Trio of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Mme. Brosius, well known in Washington, is an artist of exceptional gifts and attainments. She has a powerful but sympathetic touch, abundant temperament and splendid technique. This combined with a gracious and charming personality has won for her immediate success wherever she has appeared in concert or recital.

Guests at Concert.

Among those present were the Chief Justice of the District Supreme Court and Mrs. Alfred A. Wheat, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sim Lee, Col. John P. Hains and Miss Mary J. Hains, Mrs. John C. Capital Bride of Yesterday

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

MRS. LAWRENCE DODD SHINN,

Miss Deyber Becomes Bride Of Mr. Shinn

St. Albans Bishop's Chapel Scene of Wedding Ceremony.

The Bishop's Chapel at St. Alban's Episcopal Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Virginia Elizabeth Deyber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Bernard Deyber, and Mr. Lawrence Dade Shinn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thornton Shinn, at a small informal ceremony at high noon yesterday.

The chapel was decorated with Easter lilies. The Rev. Charles T. Warner, of St. Alban's, performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the two families only.

The bride, unattended, was given in marriage by her father. She wore a smart ensemble of navy blue cedar bark cloth, made on the new spring lines. The coat was knee-length and the blouse was of light blue. Her hat and accessories were of navy blue. She wore a cluster of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mr. John Shinn served as best man for his brother. Mrs. Deyber, mother of the bride, wore a gown of dark blue georgette, made on tailored lines, and accessories of the same shade. Her corsage was of orchids. Mrs. Shinn, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of bright spring print and matching accessories.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, and later Mr. Shinn and his bride left on a wedding trip. They will be at home at Echo Lake, Monroe County, Pa., after April 10.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming will entertain at dinner at the Chevy Chase Club Saturday evening, March 31.

Diplomats Pay Respects at "Little House" Assembly.

The National Girl Scouts' "Little House," at 1750 New York avenue, was the scene of an assembly yesterday afternoon of representatives of 29 countries interested in Girl Scout activities. Diplomats and their wives from all nations affiliated with the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, discussed their mutual interest in child welfare, education and social service.

Among those attending were the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Pazek, the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Norway and Mme. Bachke, the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. MacWhite, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Close, Lady Lindsay, from the British Embassy, and Mme. Saito from the Japanese Embassy.

Girls Scouts of Holton-Arms School, Troop 28, wore the uniforms of Scouts in distant lands. The World Association was founded by the Right Hon. Lord Baden-Powell, of Gilwell, in 1929, and headquarters are maintained in London. To symbolize the work, a world banner has been designed, showing a trefoil with stars signifying the "promise" and the "law" of scouting, a compass needle "which will always give us the right course or way in guiding," and "the flame of the love of mankind."

Officers of the Washington Council who welcomed the guests were Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr., Mrs. George Scriven, Mrs. J. Harris Franklin, Mrs. Martin Jones, Mrs. Harold Moulton, Mrs. E. Goring Bliss. Council members presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Robert Carey, Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Warren Barbour, Mrs. Charles Walcott and Mrs. Charles Hamlin.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Osborn, accompanied by Miss Alice Osborn, Mr. John Jay Osborn and Miss Pauline Raymond, of Garrison-on-Hudson, N. Y., are visiting in the Capital for several days. They are guests at the Wardman Park Hotel.

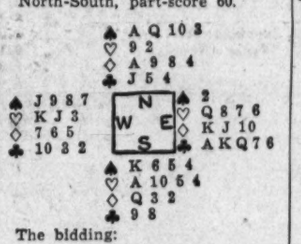
An Unusual Contract.

It is rare, indeed, to find a case where a Declarer is able to fulfill a contract to make two in a suit when, had the opponents bid the same suit, they would have been able to make three-odd—in other words, a hand that will produce a swing of four tricks dependent upon the Declarer. One of these rare hands is the following:

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable;
North-South, part-score 60.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Dbl.	2♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

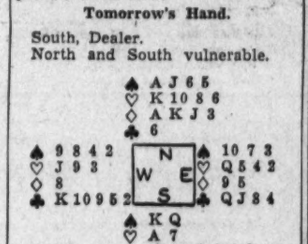
Mr. Harold S. Vanderbilt, playing the South hand, wanted to buy the contract as cheaply as possible and tried to stop the opponents from bidding the suit in which he was the weakest by bidding two clubs. To his horror, everybody passed. East, one of our great players, read, of course, Vanderbilt's club bid as a bluff and thought he had him trapped, as he actually had. Unfortunately, the defense was such that the contract was made.

West led a small heart, knowing that East must have an honor in that suit. For one reason or another, East failed to put up his Queen. He probably reasoned that South, having made a bluff bid in clubs, probably had a good heart suit and that the play of the Queen would set it up. South won with the Ten of hearts and then cashed the Ace of hearts. He then trumped a heart, returned to his hand with the King of spades and trumped another heart. Now the Ace of spades was played from Dummy, East trumped and, expecting Mr. Vanderbilt to have at least three clubs, played three rounds of trumps. Had he stopped after the second round he still could have set the contract. On the tenth trick he had left only diamonds and one more trump. He led a diamond. South won with the Queen and finessed the Ten of spades, which East trumped, and South made the balance of the tricks.

East really made only one misplay in the hand and that was on the first trick, when he failed to play the Queen of hearts. He hardly can be blamed for drawing three rounds of trumps, although it proved to be fatal.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Hospitality is spelled in terms of sets these days. Stores all over town are displaying hospitality trays, hospitality table ensembles, and many other home accessories which all serve to make company both a pleasure and a convenience.

A shop on Connecticut avenue has come to the fore with a hospitality drinking set in shining silver plate which includes everything but the drink itself.

There's the two-way conical jigger. One end will measure an ample amount for the old toper. The other end holds half as much for the go-easy guzzler. A husky looking bottle opener pulls out from its stem to reveal an equally husky corkscrew. And then there's a strainer for fruit juices, a small pair of tongs for ice cubes, a long twisted-handle spoon for highballs, and a shorter one for cocktails.

* * * *

Knick-Knacks.

A gift shop which holds such a conglomeration of knick-knacks that it's hard to see one for the many boasts an ingenious device that does away with surreptitious stealing of cherries from the Manhattan. Instead of looking slantwise to make sure no one sees us before we delve into the glass with our fingers, we can with perfect ease and assurance spear our cherry with one of these gadgets.

They're called "cocktail stirrers" and are made of glass in the shape of folded umbrellas, with sharp spear-like tips. Available in a variety of colors.

* * * *

Big and Sporty.

Eighteen-inch sport handkerchiefs were designed especially for the sportswoman who seeks a combination of the beautiful and the practical. White rope initials in the corner add extra chic, which is furthered by the variety of vivid colors in which the hankies are obtainable.

* * * *

Reflected Ivy.

The importance of mirrors is further accentuated this season by the mirror-back ivy plaques, newcomers at a Connecticut avenue store.

Small round vases in front of a mirror background do their share toward livening up plain walls. When spring flowers are more fully in bloom, a vase filled with them reflected in a mirror will convince anyone that "if eyes were made for seeing, then beauty is its own excuse for being."

Right now they're the ideal things for green, trailing ivy.

Besides those which hang on the wall, there are some designed for the table. These have the small, round glass bowls suspended in metal frames over a mirror base.

The prices are delightfully conservative.

* * * *

Knitted and Nice.

Gloves ideally adapted to the Washington climate are those of knited string. Unlike many made of fancy fabrics, these fit with a cozy snugness, giving them a well-groomed appearance.

When hot weather comes, gloves of this type will serve the double purpose of looking well and being cool. They come in white, eggshell and blue, and they've been ordered in other colors.

* * * *

Plaid and Perky.

Bags of a variety of spring fabrics are specially made for a local shop in new and original styles. One of the most attractive on display now is a plaid linen over a stiff frame. The concealed opening at the top fastens securely with a zipper. The one in the show case is a smart plaid pattern of blue, green, yellow, and black.

With a pure white linen suit, or a long natural colored linen coat, there isn't anything smarter than such a bag. It can be ordered in almost any color combination, or in solids.

* * * *

For Recalcitrant Cuticle.

There are many women who suffer from brittle cuticle that breaks and peels off in ragged fashion leaving the nails in a dilapidated condition.

This, in most cases, can be remedied easily by consistent application of creams and oils. There is a cream on the market now made especially for this condition, called a cuticle beautifier. It's simply to be rubbed on the cuticle, allowed to remain a short while and then taken off. It softens the brittle skin and allows it to be pushed back, and the dead portions removed.

* * * *

Very Handy.

Individual canape trays in modernistic design are the epitome of convenience. One side is rounded off to hold the cup—or glass in this day and time—while the other side is just right for a dainty hors d'oeuvre, or what have you? Available in an F street shop.

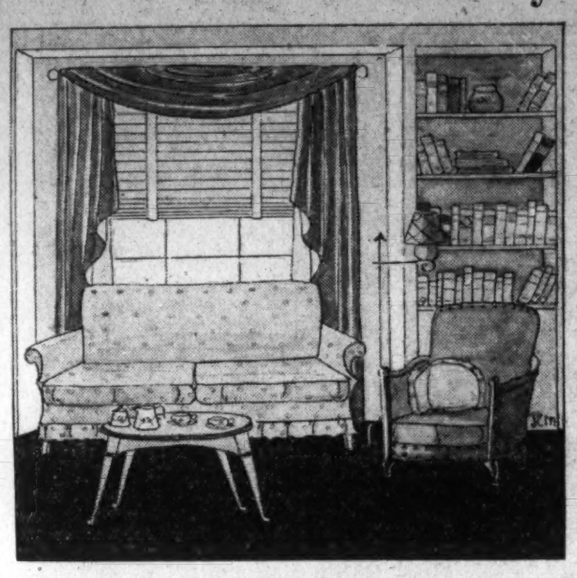
Furniture Rearrangement Advisable for Warm Days



By Jo Ellen Maxson.

WHILE A FIREPLACE is the natural center of interest in a living room on winter afternoons and evenings, the warm spring and summer months call for new arrangements of your furniture.

The first thing to consider is the purpose of your group of furniture. One of the underlying principles of successful arrangement is to have a definite plan in mind when purchasing your pieces. In the modern sense a living room should be adequately equipped to satisfy the tastes and interests of the various members of the family.

If a home is large enough to have both a living room and drawing room, the latter can be decorated more formally and used less frequently than the living room where the members of the family and more intimate friends gather.

In one effectively decorated living room there are three definite centers of interest. The first is the grouping around the sofa. The chairs are placed conveniently near the sofa to avoid dragging furniture around when an extra person or two come in. The sofa is slip-covered in cool green glazed chintz, patterned in beige polka dots and welded in beige chintz. The walls of the room are buff, and the carpeting henna. A maple tea table, wrought iron lamps with parchment shades, and two arm chairs complete the group.

At the other end of the room is a colonial slant-top desk, the central piece in the group arranged for writing purposes. The desk is of maple with pierced brass handles and locks. In a larger room a more massive type of desk, such as a Gov. Winthrop or a well-proportioned secretary, would be more suitable. With the maple desk is a straight-backed Windsor chair, and nearby are a shelf of books and a copper-based lamp with a shade of brown and white candy-striped chintz.

A third corner of the room is for bridge, backgammon, chess, anagrams, or any of the various table games. One of the new card tables is used. It is entirely of maple in a colonial design and good-looking enough to be a permanent part of the furnishings. The copper inserts at each of the four corners protect the top from discolorations and sticky rings. The chairs are finished in maple with slat backs and rush seats. With the addition of an attractive bridge lamp with a crisp, green-checked shade, this game corner is a decorative as well as utilitarian part of the room.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help with home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

By Susan Mills.

CHEF MARSHAL OF CLUB MICHEL has observed the characteristic dishes of the nations. It is a hobby of his, he says. He likes to try to discover what people like best to eat.

In speaking of American tastes, he said: "Americans like best of all, chicken a la king!"

It is hard to find a restaurant or hotel in which chicken a la king is not served. Its popularity is unquestioned.

However, there are several delightful ways of preparing chicken. Not only fried, broiled, roasted or stewed in its simple and natural form, but different methods that make the dishes attractive and unusual by the addition of a little something here and there.

The following two recipes are examples. If you have no stock at hand a can of chicken broth may be substituted.

Paprika Chicken.

Salt and pepper.
1 onion, chopped.
2¼ cups flour.
1½ teaspoons paprika.
1½ cups chicken stock.
4 tablespoons fat.

Cut up the fowl. Season each piece and roll it in flour with which the paprika has been mixed. Heat the fat in a deep frying pan and cook the onion in it. (The size of the onion is determined by the family's fondness for it.) Add the pieces of chicken and brown well. Add the hot chicken stock, cover pan tightly, and simmer for about 2½ hours, or until the meat is very tender.

Chicken Viennese.

Olive oil.
1 bay leaf.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
1 cup chicken stock.
1 tablespoon parsley.
Salt and pepper.
2 eggs, well beaten.
Bread crumbs, browned.
1 egg yolk.
1 cup milk.
10 small mushrooms.

Cut up cleaned chicken. Cover with a mixture of the lemon juice and olive. Add parsley, bay leaf, salt and pepper. Cook gently until chicken is almost done. Remove from fat, drain, dip each piece of chicken into eggs, then into crumbs, and brown in a little of the olive oil. Mix the chicken stock, milk, egg yolk, seasoning and heat thoroughly, stirring. Just before removing from the fire add the mushrooms. Pour sauce around chicken on deep platter. Garnish with slices of lemon and a few sprigs of parsley.

What Today Means

"Aries."

If March 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 to 8 a. m., from 2 to 3 p. m. and from 6 to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 8 to 9 p. m.

If March 23 is your birthday, it is probably advisable for you to guard against allowing yourself to drift into a habit of indecision, when confronted by problems requiring prompt action. Remember, "manana" (tomorrow) never comes. The old saying, "Procrastination is the thief of time," is one well worth keeping constantly in our memory. Indulging in too much self gratification and seeking to shirk responsibilities are two things we should be mentally alert about, so they can not creep upon us unawares, and fasten themselves upon us as permanent drawbacks to our mental and spiritual development.

The child born on March 23, as it grows up, will prove very capable and lovable. It is most important that children born on this date are taught to control their tempers. They will display a tendency toward taking a pleasure in being reckless. The rougher and more dangerous the sport, the greater will be its appeal to them, so words of caution will not be amiss. Although possessing plenty of mentality, their buoyancy of spirits possibly will make sports and pleasures of far greater interest than their studies, but they will have the happy faculty of getting through their school examinations by "the skin of their teeth." They will, later in life, be more successful than their more studious classmates.

The woman born on March 23 might find she can accomplish a great deal more of worth-while work if she lessened the time that the promptings of vanity causes her to lose in making her toilet. It is almost a crime if a woman does not take the proper interest in her most valuable asset, her personal appearance. Unfortunately, many women let it become an obsession, and then go to the other extreme, which involves too great a loss of useful energy. Men, as a rule, admire the woman nature, and not cosmetics, has created and, like bulls, a display of brilliant red affects their optic nerves in a most disagreeable manner. Be wise and considerate of all the members of the animal kingdom.

The man born on March 23 is rather a supersensitive individual when anything resembling personal criticism is concerned. He may find life more pleasant if he overcomes his extreme dislike for being hurried, or his ease when his relaxing is disturbed. If he will not indulge in little personal weaknesses, with his brains and capability he can make an unqualified success out of his life.

Blue Bonnets Flower Show Drawing Card

Tucked away in the flowering acres of Grand Central Palace, this pot of wild blooms from the Pacific Coast stole the spotlight from some of the showier flowers.

Visitors, who looked with mild interest on the J. P. Morgan lilies, the Samuel Seabury orchids, the Eleanor Roosevelt rose and begonias from Borneo, linger over the wild "blue bonnets."

The 27 by 15 foot exhibit, reached after passing tulip borders, daffodil banks and rock gardens galore, offered the city dweller his first glimpse, in years, of a wild onion.

They were plain flowers, for the most part: "Monkey Flowers," "Cat's Ears," "Cream Cups" and "Tidy Tips;" "Pink Fairies," "Prickly Phlox" and a little plant called "Farewell to Spring."

But to officeworkers who seldom get far from Times Square they brought a breath of pine woods and mountains.

The varieties ranged from flowers half an inch high to Douglas fir and coastal pine trees. A mild yellow flower, hailed by former residents of the West as "brodiaea ixodes," drew the most attention. Next in line were an evening primrose and a mountain poppy.

Real gardens carpeted with something that looked like grass.

A woodland scene—several rods of it—with real earth, tree trunks and dead leaves.

Running brooks and rocky ledges.

Post-WJSV Recipes

Drowned Spinsters.

(German style.)

Beat up yolks of 2 eggs with 2 tablespoons sugar and 2 tablespoons flour; add the beaten whites of eggs. Make small heaps of the mixture with a teaspoon. Fry in melted butter until golden brown. Serve with sauce. Sauce—To ½ pint of red wine add a little raspberry wine or jelly, bring to a boil, add ¼ pounds of raisins.

Poor Knights.

(German style.)

Cut sandwich bread in strips about ¼ inch thick, steep in egg beaten with milk and sugar; fry in butter until golden brown. Pile on dish and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Serve with sauce made of a cup of red wine and a cup of water boiled, and add sugar to taste, some almonds and raisins. Pour over bread sticks and serve at once before they become soft.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Genetics in America.

The term genetics is the name given all methods for changing the physical and mental qualities of a population by means of breeding or inheritance. The term eugenics is given those genetic influences that improve a people. Dysgenics is the term used for those that deteriorate a stock. All improvements in the stock which result from better food supplies, clothing, housing, sanitation and more work or exercise are said to be environmental—improvement by means of better living conditions. Those which result from better inheritance are, by contrast, called eugenic procedures.

Man, in his long and difficult struggle upward from savagery, has had occasion to learn much about the laws of sanitation and hygiene. He learned how to clothe and house himself so as to live in all climates from the equator to the poles. He learned which foods were good for him, how to conquer insects, how to work and to rest, how to spend and to save, how to protect the children and the old, how to combat his enemies.

The science of genetics has crawled along hundreds or thousand of years behind the science of hygiene and sanitation. Man's knowledge of the science of human genetics is at least decades and maybe centuries behind his practice of genetics of the domestic animals—horses, dogs and cows.

But the stress and strain through which the civilization of the Western World has been passing in this twentieth century is forcing most of the peoples of North America and of western Europe to turn their attention to human genetics in order to save what they have gained since the birth of Christ. Twenty-three States in the Union have eugenics laws, and some have been in operation for a quarter of a century. Some of these laws have been declared valid by the higher courts. Over 12,000 people have been directly affected by them.

These are negative eugenic laws, but positive eugenic procedures will follow. Abroad we find that Italy, Germany, Russia and some other nations have gone farther than we have.

The Dragon Murder Case

By S. S. Van Dine.

The Story Thus Far.

Philo Vance and District Attorney Markham, with Sergt. Heath, are investigating the strange disappearance of Sanford Montague in the old Dragon Pool on the Stamm estate. According to Leland, one of Stamm's guests, each member of the house party, with the exception of Bernice Stamm, to whom he was engaged, had sufficient motive for murdering Montague. Stamm was hopelessly intoxicated at the time of the tragedy. Stamm's mother is convinced the pool is inhabited by a dragon that protects her family against its enemies, of whom she claims Montague was one.

"I hate humanity," the woman declared bitterly. "This would be a cleaner, better world if mankind had been omitted from the scheme of things."

"Yes, yes, of course." Vance's tone suddenly changed, and he spoke with a certain decisive positivity. "But may I ask—the hour is getting rather late, y'know—just why you insisted on seeing us?"

The woman stiffened and leaned forward. The intense hysterical look came back into her eyes, and her hands flexed at her sides.

Chapter VI.

A Grim History.

"You're the police, aren't you?" said Mrs. Stamm, "and you're here trying to find out things. * * * I wanted to tell you how Mr. Montague lost his life. Listen to me! He was killed by the dragon—do you understand that? He was killed by the dragon! No one in this house had anything to do with his death—no one! * * * That's what I wanted to tell you." Her voice rose as she spoke, and there was a terrific passion in her words.

Vance's steady gaze did not leave her.

"But why, Mrs. Stamm," he asked, "do you assume that we think someone here had a hand in Montague's death?"

"You wouldn't be here if you didn't think so," she retorted angrily, with an artful gleam in her eyes.

"Was what you heard your son say, just before you screamed," Vance asked, "the first inkling you had of the tragedy?"

"Yes!" The word was an ejaculation. But she added more calmly: "I have known for days that tragedy was hanging over this house."

"Then why did you scream, Mrs. Stamm?"

"I was startled—and terrified, perhaps—when I realized what the dragon had done."

"But how could you possibly have known," argued Vance, "that it was the dragon who was responsible for Montague's disappearance under the water?"

"Great Shape Against Sky."

"Oh, yes! About an hour ago I was standing by the window here, looking down at the pool—for some reason I was unable to sleep and had got out of bed. Suddenly I saw a great shape against the sky, and I heard the familiar flutter of wings coming nearer * * * nearer * * * And then I saw the dragon sweep over the treetops and down before the face of the cliff opposite. And I saw him dive into the pool with a great splash, and I saw the white spray rise from the water where he had disappeared * * * And then all was silence again. The dragon had returned to his home."

Vance walked to the window and looked out.

"It's pretty dark," he continued. "I'm dashed if I can see the cliff from here—or even the water."

"But I can see—I can see," the woman protested shrilly, turning on Vance, and shaking her fingers at him. "I can see many things that other people can't see. And I tell you I saw the dragon return——"

She gave a shrewd smile.

"I won't tell you that—I won't give away the dragon's secret * * * But I will tell you this," she went on: "He had taken the body away to hide it."

"Mr. Montague's body?"

"Of course. He never leaves the bodies of his victims in the pool."

"Then there have been other victims?" Vance inquired.

"Many victims." The woman spoke in a strained sepulchral voice. "And he always hides their bodies."

"It might upset your theory a bit, Mrs. Stamm," Vance pointed out to her, "if we should find Mr. Montague's body in the pool."

She chuckled in a way that sent a shiver through me.

"Find his body? Find his body in the pool? You can't find it. It's not there!"

Vance regarded her a moment in silence. Then he bowed.

"Thank you, Mrs. Stamm, for your information and help. I trust the episode has not disturbed you too much and that you will rest tonight."

He turned and walked toward the door, and the rest of us followed him. In the hall Dr. Holliday stopped.

"I'm staying up here for a while," he told Vance. "I think I can get her to sleep now * * * But, for heaven's sake, don't take anything she said tonight seriously. She often has these little periods of hallucinosis. It's really nothing to worry about."

"I quite understand," Vance returned, shaking hands with him.

(Sunday, August 12: 2:20 a. m.)

We descended to the main hallway, and Vance led the way back to the drawing room.

"Well, are you through now?" Markham asked him irritably.

"Not quite."

I had rarely seen Vance so serious or so reluctant to postpone an investigation. I knew that he had been deeply interested in Mrs. Stamm's hysterical recital; but I could not understand, at the time, his reason for prolonging an interview that seemed to me both futile and tragic. As he stood before the fireplace his mind seemed far away, and there was a puzzled corrugation on his forehead. He watched the curling smoke from his cigarette for several moments. Suddenly, with a slight toss of the head, he brought himself back to his surroundings and turned to Leland, who was leaning against the center table.

"What did Mrs. Stamm mean," he asked, "when she referred to other victims whose bodies the dragon had hidden?"

Leland moved uneasily and looked down at his pipe.

"There was a modicum of truth in that remark," he returned. "There have been two authentic deaths in the pool that I know of. But Mrs. Stamm was probably referring also to the wild stories which the old crones tell of mysterious disappearances in the pool in the old days."

"Sounds something like the old-timers' tales of Kehoe's Hole in Newark. * * * What were the two authentic cases you speak of?"

"One happened about seven years ago, shortly after Stamm and I returned from our expedition to Cocos Island. Two suspicious characters were scouting the neighborhood—probably with a view to burglary—and one of them fell off the cliff on the far side of the pool and was evidently drowned. Two schoolgirls from the vicinity saw him fall, and later the police picked up his companion, who eventually, under questioning, verified the other's disappearance."

"Disappearance?"

Leland nodded grimly.

"Body Was Never Found."

There was a suggestion of a skeptical smile on Vance's mouth as he asked: "How do you account for that?"

"There is only one sensible way of accounting for it," answered Leland, with a slightly aggressive accent, as if endeavoring to convince himself with his own words. "The stream gets swollen at times, and there is quite a flow of water over the dam—sufficient to carry a floating body over, if it happened to be caught by the current at a certain angle. This fellow's body was probably washed over the dam and carried down to the Hudson River."

"A bit far-fetched, but none the less tenable. * * * And the other case?"

"Some boys trespassed here one afternoon and went swimming. One of them, as I recall, dived from a ledge of the cliff into the shallow water, and did not come up. As soon as the authorities were notified—by an unidentified phone call, incidentally—the pool was drained, but there was no trace of the body. Later, however, after the newspapers had a two-day sensation of the affair, the boy's body was found in the Indian Cave on the other side of the Cove. He had fractured his skull."

"And do you, by any chance, have an explanation for that episode also?" Vance asked with a tinge of curtness.

Death Laid to Dive.

Leland shot him a quick glance.

"I should say the boy struck his head in diving, and the other boys in the party became frightened and, not wanting to leave the body in the pool, lest they become involved, carried it down to the cave and hid it. It was probably one of them that telephoned to the police."

"Oh, quite. Very simple, don't y' know." Vance looked into space meditatively. "Yet both cases have ample esoteric implications to have taken root in Mrs. Samm's weakened mind."

"Undoubtedly," Leland agreed.

A short silence ensued. Vance walked slowly across the room and back, his hands in his outer coat pockets, his head forward on his chest, his cigarette drooping from his lips. I knew what this attitude signified—some stimulus had suddenly arouse a train of thought in his mind. He again took up his position before the mantel and crushed out his cigarette on the hearth. He slowly turned his head toward Leland.

"You mentioned your expedition to Cocos Island," he said lazily. "Was it the lure of the Mary Dear treasure?"

"Oh, yes. The other famous caches are all too vague. Capt. Thompson's treasure, however, is undeniably the largest."

"Did you use the Keating map?"

"Not altogether." Leland seemed as puzzled as the rest of us by Vance's line of questioning. "It is hardly authentic now, and I imagine several purely romantic directions entered into it—such as the stone turnstile to the cave. Stamm ran across an old map in his travels, which antedated, by many years, the original British survey of Cocos Island of 1838.

"So similar was it to this chart that he believed it to be genuine. We followed the directions on this map, checking them with the navigators' chart in the Hydrographic Office of the United States Navy Department."

Details a Bit Hazy.

"The details were a bit hazy on that point. And that was what so impressed Stamm and, I must confess, myself also. You see, this old map differed in one vital respect from the United States Navy navigators' chart, in that it indicated land where the United States chart shows Wafer Bay; and it was on this section of land that the hiding place of the treasure was indicated."

A flicker came into Vance's eyes, but when he spoke his tone was casual and but mildly animated.

"By Jove! I see the point. Most interestin'. There's no doubt that landslides and tropical rains have altered the topography of Cocos Island, and many of the old landmarks have doubtless disappeared. I presume Mr. Stamm assumed that the land where the treasure was originally hidden now lies under the waters of the bay which is indicated on the more recent charts."

"Exactly. Even the French survey of 1889 did not show as large a bay as the American survey made in 1891; and it was Stamm's theory that the treasure lay beneath the waters of Wafer Bay, which is rather shallow at that spot."

"A difficult undertaking," Vance commented. "How long were you at the island?"

"The better part of three months." Leland smiled ruefully. "It took Stamm that length of time to realize that he did not possess the proper equipment. The shoals in the bay are treacherous, and there are curious holes at the bottom of the water, owing, no doubt, to geological conditions; and our diving equipment would have been scorned by any good pearl fisher. What we needed, of course, was a specially constructed diving bell, something like Mr. Beebe's bathysphere. Even that would have been just a beginning, for we were helpless without powerful submarine dredges. The one we took along was wholly inadequate * * *"

Markham Clamps Cigar.

Markham, who had been noticeably chafing under Vance's discussion of hidden treasure, now rose and strode forward, his cigar held tightly between his teeth.

"Where is all this getting us, Vance? If you are contemplating a trip to Cocos Island, I'm sure Mr. Leland would be willing to make a future appointment with you to discuss the details. And as for all the other investigations you have made here tonight: I can't see that anything has been brought to light that hasn't an entirely normal and logical explanation."

Heath, who had been following all the proceedings closely, now projected himself into the conversation.

"I'm not so sure about things around here being normal, sir." Though deferential, his tone was vigorous. "I'm for going ahead with this case. Some mighty queer things have happened tonight, and I don't like 'em."

Vance smiled appreciatively at the sergeant.

"Stout fella!" He glanced toward Markham. "Another half hour and we'll stagger home."

Markham gave in ungraciously.

"What more do you want to do here tonight?"

Vance lighted another cigarette.

"I could bear to commune with Greeff. * * * Suppose you tell the butler to fetch him, sergeant."

A few minutes later Alex Greeff was ushered into the drawing room by Trainor. He was a large, powerfully built man, with a ruddy bulldog type of face—wide-spaced eyes, a short, thick nose, heavy lips and a strong, square chin. He was slightly bald, and there were cushions of gray hair over his small, close-set ears. He was wearing a conventional dinner suit, but there were certain touches of vulgar elegance in his attire. The satin lapels of his coat were highly peaked. There were two diamond studs in his shirt bosom. Across his satin waistcoat was draped a platinum chain set with large pearls. His tie, instead of being solid black, had white pin stripes running through it; and his wing collar seemed too high for his stocky neck.

He took a few steps toward us with his hands in his pockets, planted himself firmly, and glowered at us angrily.

Chapter VII.

A Contretemps.

Greeff now centered his bellicose attention on Markham.

"Well, perhaps, you can tell me, sir," he growled, "why I am being held a virtual prisoner in this house. This man"—indicating Heath—"ordered me to remain in my room until further notice, and refused to let me go home. What is the meaning of such high-handed tactics?"

"A tragedy has taken place here tonight, Mr. Greeff——" Markham began, but he was interrupted by the other.

"Suppose an accident has happened, is that any reason why I should be held a prisoner without due process of law?"

"There are certain phases of the case," Markham told him, "that we are looking into, and it was to facilitate the investigation that Sergt. Heath requested all the witnesses to remain here until we could question them."

"Well, go ahead and question me." Greeff seemed a little mollified, and his tone had lost some of its belligerency.

Vance moved forward.

"Sit down and have a smoke, Mr. Greeff," he suggested pleasantly. "We sha'n't keep you long."

Greeff hesitated, looked at Vance suspiciously; then shrugged, and drew up a chair. Vance waited until the man had fitted a cigarette into a long jeweled holder, and then asked:

"Did you notice—or sense—anything peculiar about Montague's disappearance in the pool tonight?"

"Peculiar?" Greeff looked up slowly, and his eyes narrowed to shrewd slits. "So that's the angle, is it? Well, I'm not saying there wasn't something peculiar about it, now that you mention it; but I'm damned if I can tell you what it was."

Born in the Nation's Capital, Miss Eunice Dessez can not remember when the Washington Monument (above) was not a familiar sight. A clerk at the Navy Department, in the Navy Building (upper right), she has made it possible for war orphans to receive college educations.

Eunice Dessez Still Campaigns Vigorously for Scholarships

Like Other Women in Government Work, Her Career Was Launched in War Time; Now Works in Navy Department.

Government work needs no distance to lend it enchantment and glamour. Women who were born and reared in Washington strive just as eagerly as residents of the West, East, South and Middle West to obtain Government positions.

This, the fifth in a series of articles on women who hold interesting Government positions, tells of a Washington-born woman who was swept into Government work when the excitement of war-time days reigned in the Nation's Capital.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

WASHINGTON-BORN EUNICE DESSEZ, clerk in the Naval Communications branch of the Navy Department, has spent her spare time during the last five years in playing fairy-godmother to war orphans of the District.

Through Miss Dessez's efforts, boys and girls who lost their fathers in the war have been able to attend college.

Five years ago there was no provision for the education of these young people after they left high school. Energetic Miss Dessez, who had recruited men for the Navy in war time and who had served the District Department of the American Legion as vice commander, decided that something ought to be done.

First she sent questionnaires to the orphans' guardians to find out just how many of the boys and girls were in earnest about continuing their studies. The answers revealed that virtually all of them were hoping to find a way to get to college. This was both gratifying and disturbing to Miss Dessez; gratifying that the young people were so ambitious; disturbing since she had no means of putting a single one through school.

How to Get Scholarships.

"I realized that I would have to get scholarships," said Miss Dessez yesterday at her home in the All States Hotel. "But I didn't have any idea how to go about it. Then one day I heard that the late Father Hurney, a Navy chaplain and pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, was an intimate friend of the president of Georgetown University. So I went to see Father Hurney."

The priest, after listening to her story, told her to go home and put in a letter all that she had told him. Miss Dessez laughingly admitted that it took her an entire evening to compose that letter. But it brought results. Georgetown gave her a three-year scholarship. Other schools followed Georgetown's lead.

Columbus University offered a three-year law course; Southeastern University gave four one-year scholarships, and National University granted two prelegal courses. Several other schools, willing to aid the war orphans, wished their names to be kept secret.

Raising Money for Books.

Miss Dessez had just managed to fit some of the young people into the courses offered when another problem bobbed up. Several students had no money with which to buy books.

Last summer, when the situation was desperate, she hit upon the plan of a moonlight excursion on the Potomac. After chartering a boat she began rounding up a crowd.

The day of the big excursion finally arrived. It was one of the rainiest of the season.

'It poured buckets," moaned Miss Dessez, as she recalled her anxiety when she waited for the excursionists to appear. "Only a few hardy souls came. The trip was canceled. But the boat company didn't cancel the amount I had promised to pay. I had to dig up $98 somehow. While I was wondering how I could possibly do it, the money began to come in from generous persons who had planned to go on the excursion. So, after paying the boat company, I had $33 left for books," she finished triumphantly.

If the District should take over the task of sending war orphans to college, undoubtedly Eunice Dessez will find another outlet for her energies. Ever since she left the Convent of the Sisters of the Holy Cross she has been embroiled in some activity.

In Recruiting Service.

Two days after the United States entered the World War, Miss Dessez enlisted in the Navy's recruiting service. A brother had joined the Canadian Army several months before and lay wounded in France. Miss Dessez hoped to be sent across so she might be with him, but her service in the Navy was confined to this side.

Her most exciting work was in making up orders for the "naval land battery," the first guns ever to be mounted on trains. Most of this work was done late at night, after she had spent the day in recruiting for the Navy. When the orders were completed Admiral Plunkett gave her a big box of candy; she says it was the best candy she ever ate.

A more substantial reward is in store for Miss Dessez. For her work among the war orphans, the American Legion is going to present her with the Watson B. Miller silver trophy and plaque; the first time a woman has received this honor.

Will Receive Trophy.

Everything was in readiness for the presentation several weeks ago, but Miss Dessez, the day before the big event, suffered a broken arm.

"I had the same sensation as when the rain spoiled my moonlight excursion," she laughed. "But I understand that the trophy and plaque will be given to me as soon as I am able to receive them."

Meanwhile she is back on the job in the Navy Department, receiving code messages from battleships far out in the Pacific and from destroyers in the Atlantic.

Mrs. Roosevelt Due to Attend Voters School

Many Outstanding Speakers Will Address Session Saturday.

Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the all-day session of the League of Women Voters' Citizenship School on Personnel in Government tomorrow at the Washington Hotel. She will be a luncheon guest of honor when Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation and arbiter in the railroad disputes now threatening the New Deal, discusses personnel problems in Federal agencies.

The issue of the merit system versus the spoils system in Federal personnel administration, which has attracted the interest of Mrs. Roosevelt as a question of vital interest to citizens of the whole country, will be the main theme of discussion at the school.

Tomorrow's meeting will provide an open forum for public discussion of such questions as "Should Government jobs be given on a strict basis of merit?" and "Does the present system serve the best interests of the public?"

Many Will Attend.

All sessions will be open to the public. The heads of all Federal Government employes' organizations have been especially invited, as well as both men's and women's political clubs of both major parties, members of both House and Senate committees on the Civil Service, and Federal personnel administrators.

On the program will be speakers representing the three points of view: The political party leader, the Government office holder, and the citizen-taxayer. Lewis Merriman, political scientist of the Brookings Institution, will lead the discussion at the morning session.

Other speakers will be Ambrose O'Connell, assistant to Postmaster General Farley; Dr. W. W. Stockberger, personnel director of the Department of Agriculture, and Ismar Baruch, chief of the Personnel Classification Division of the U. S. Civil Service Commisson.

Mitchell to Speak.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, newest commissioner, will speak at the luncheon meeting. Mrs. McMillin has been an active member of the League of Women Voters in Tennessee.

Congressman Lamar Jeffers, of Alabama, chairman of the House Committee on Civil Service, and H. Eliot Kaplan, secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League, will be speakers in the afternoon, when Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, of New York, will preside.

Out-of-Town Guests.

Mrs. W. W. Ramsey, of Chicago, a former vice president of the national organization, will speak on the citizen's interest in Government personnel.

A number of out-of-town guests are expected to attend. Among them will be a group of league members from Baltimore, headed by their president, Mrs. C. E. Ellicott, and Miss Lavinia Engle, member of the Maryland State Legislature. Mrs. Jessie I. Irwin will represent Minnesota, and Miss Leslie Hopkinson, Massachusetts.

Mrs. Elwood Street, wife of the Director of the Community Chest, is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The POST PARADE

Painless Exertion.

"WE WOMEN BACK EAST, may know something about relief work. We do it comfortably, though, as we rush about," said Mrs. Ligon Forbes of the publicity office, Federal Emergency Relief. "Wonder how we'd like to do it on horseback over miles and miles of territory between the needy families.

"One of our workers, Miss Mae Fuller, of Harding County, S. Dak., writes of riding horseback day after day distributing blankets to those who might otherwise suffer from cold. Miss Fuller's salary is little, if anything."

As a small girl and her mother passed the Clara Hill portrait bust of Pocahontas, now in the lobby of the children's room at the Northeastern branch of the Public Library, the child said:

"Mother, was she a librarian, too?"

Embarrassing Moment.

THE YOUNG WIFE of a Washington political reporter experienced one of life's most embarrassing moments one day last week while sitting in the visitors' gallery of the House. With her was her 3-year-old son. A lively session was in progress and an earnest Congressman had just given an eloquent plea for the cause under discussion.

The applause was spontaneous and enthusiastic. It aroused even the blood of the youngster, who perhaps didn't comprehend the technical points of the debate, but did catch the spirit of the occasion. The applause ceased. There followed a moment's expectant silence.

• • • •

Three-year-old could restrain himself no longer. An irresponsible male relative had been teaching him a sneeze that was a cross between a rebel yell and a Comanche Indian war-whoop. "Hach," shrilled the child. "Wah-Hoo!"

Interest in Gardens.

"WE GATHER THAT there will be many rock gardens and lily ponds and many new pools for goldfish about Washington this summer, judging from the number of requests for books on those subjects we're having here at the library," reports Miss Matilde Williams of the central branch of the Public Library.

Queen Emma One of History's Famous Royal Queen-Makers

She Modeled Her Daughter Wilhelmina's Character the Way the Duchess of Kent Trained Queen Victoria.

"ARE THERE ANY truly great women in the world?" Rosita Forbes, explorer and author, once was asked.

The widely traveled Englishwoman hesitated. "Yes," she replied slowly, "I believe there are—a few. There's Queen Wilhelmina for one."

The woman who exercised the guiding hand in making Wilhelmina great died Tuesday. She was the Dowager Queen Emma of Holland, a woman who will rank in history beside another great queen-maker, the Duchess of Kent, mother of the late Queen Victoria.

Many men have been made what they are by their mothers—if public orators are to be believed—but few women have been such supreme products of mother devotion and direction as have been Victoria and Wilhelmina. And consistently enough, there has been a marked analogy in their characters and careers.

Queen Emma, perhaps a more gentle type of woman than the indomitable Duchess of Kent, nevertheless exercised a firm hand in preparing her daughter for the Dutch throne. The strict upbringing of Wilhelmina made her much the same hard-working, serious-minded and strait-laced type as the great English queen.

Both Victoria and Wilhelmina lost their fathers early and were reared by widowed mothers. Both ascended their thrones while girls and both married German consorts.

Obviously, Wilhelmina's mother held Victoria in her mind as a model in shaping her own daughter's character. She took Wilhelmina to see the royal matriarch in London, and the visit is said to have so greatly impressed the young queen that in subsequent years she modeled her conduct to a large extent on the Victorian pattern.

Wilhelmina was 10 years old when her father, King William III, died in 1890, and she at once succeeded to the throne, her mother acting as regent until she attained her majority.

The child Queen not only became the idol of Holland but caught the fancy of the world. During the 90's women everywhere read with eager interest of the doings of Wilhelmina and of the careful upbringing that the Queen Mother Emma was according her.

One popular story related that Wilhelmina, having been banished from her mother's room for naughtiness, beat on the closed door and clamored for instant admission because she was the "Queen of Holland."

The mother is said to have replied: "The Queen of Holland must remain outside until she behaves properly." Finally Wilhelmina sobbed through the door crack, "Mother's little girl wants to come in," whereupon the door was opened.

Wilhelmina's mother also saw that her daughter mastered the household and domestic arts. Like Victoria, she was taught rigid economy and has always observed it in her royal household.

The queen mother of Holland saw her queen-making efforts reach their culmination in 1898 when Wilhelmina on her eighteenth birthday fully assumed the throne and was crowned amid national rejoicing

Women Legislators Talk Less Than Men, Says Representative

Eighty-four-Year-Old Congressman Dickinson Approves Heartily of Feminine Contingent in Congress; Maintains They're Extremely Capable.

AFTER LISTENING TO nearly two decades of oratory in the House of Representatives, Clement Cabell Dickinson, oldest member of Congress, has decided that women legislators talk less than do men.

When a Congresswoman speaks, Representative Dickinson points out, she throws her heart into her words and everyone is apt to listen. While with Congressmen, talking often becomes a habit.

The 84-year-old Representative, who was first elected to Congress in 1910 during President Taft's Administration, is unperturbed by the feminine invasion of the Congressional field. In fact, he asserts gallantly that he is glad to see women in Congress.

"Women fit into the Congressional picture practically as well as ornamentally," he said.

"To illustrate, there is Florence Kahn, of California, functioning as capably as any man could on the difficult Appropriations Committee. Years ago such an assignment would have been considered beyond the comprehension of a woman. Then there is Representative Mary Norton, of New Jersey, who demonstrates real leadership as chairman of the District Committee. She also fights the battles of labor.

"Taking their places in civil service legislation we find two women, Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, and Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana. Mrs. Jenckes is working on mining problems and Mrs. Rogers is delving into the intricacies of foreign affairs. Mrs. Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, meanwhile, is proving her capabilities in the interests of public lands, Indian affairs, irrigation and reclamation problems. Does all this sound as though woman's field in Congress should be limited?"

Since he came to Congress in 1910, Representative Dickinson failed to be reelected from his district but twice, first in the Harding landslide of 1920 and again in 1928. His chief activities have centered about the ways and means committee of which he has been a member through all his terms in Congress.

Flapper Era May Return

Romantic Feeling in Dress Threatened by Shorts, Says Editor.

New York, March 22 (Spl.).—Romance, which recently staged a comeback in clothes and in attitudes, is threatened again with extinction—this time by shorts.

Once knee-length skirts snuffed out sentiment and enthroned realism. Now the growing vogue for shorts gives evidence of heralding another flapper era in the opinion of Mrs. Alice Perkins, Paris fashion editor of Women's Wear.

In an address before the Fashion Group, Mrs. Perkins predicted that the popularity of shorts would influence not only sports attire but also evening dress.

"If women are going back to looking like children on the beach," she said, "I do not know whether they will continue to look like stately and romantic ladies in the evening—in which case there may be a big field for youthful evening suits."

Mrs. Perkins pointed out that if women wore shorts all morning on the beaches their eyes would become accustomed to shorter silhouettes.

The vogue for shorts already has influenced leg and foot styles, according to Mrs. Perkins. Stocking manufacturers she said reported an increased demand for sheer hosiery and cosmetic makers and shoe manufacturers were profiting from the greater interest in foot appearance. Make-up for legs was becoming more important, cosmeticians reported.

Try Again.

By Katherine Smith.

Take back your half-meant truths, and give me
Candid little lies again.
Return to your deceptive tactics;
Let your heart be false, for when
I know you thus, so well, I can not Choose but doubt your verity,
And so, if you have pity, give me
Forceful lies, convincingly.

Marriages Still Are Prevalent, Records Show

Depression Years Didn't Hurt This Particular Business.

"Hitler comes to the aid of Cupid," headlines recorded in yesterday's papers. And many a sentimental soul rejoiced that romance had found a champion in unromantic-looking Mr. Hitler.

But while Cupid is grinning from ear to ear over the $59,550,000 appropriation for newly weds in Germany, no one has given the popular little god a helping hand in America. And many of the curious have wondered just how he has weathered the depression.

Mrs. Maud Rhinex, clerk of the District Marriage License Bureau, says he hasn't fared badly at all, and she has figures to prove it. These figures show convincingly that Cupid is more than lovable—he is sturdy—and it takes something bigger than a depression to put him out of business.

True, several hundred more people were married in the District in 1929 than in 1933, but at no time did the figure go below 5,000. The youngsters seem to have taken for their motto the happy-go-lucky song of last year, "We can pay them a dollar down on the house and they can sue us for the rest, a-a-h lack-a-day, what have we got to lose?"

"In 1929, 5,448 people obtained marriage licenses in the District," Mrs. Rhinex said yesterday. "From that time on the number went down The lowest was 3,098, in 1932; in 1933 it was 5,264. This year the number has steadily increased. In January and February more than 100 more licenses were issued than for the corresponding months last year."

Senator McCarran Reminisces About "America's Sweetheart"

Strange that a reporter should go to Senator "Pat" McCarran, Nevada's Iron Man from the Desert, to ask about a Hollywood character. But the tip for the story was right. Senator McCarran knows Mary Pickford. He knows her well. He was her attorney in her divorce suit back in 1920.

"So you want to know about Mary Pickford? Poor, lovely unhappy Mary!" the vigorous, white-haired, ruddy-faced Senator said.

"What I really think about Mary Pickford is this—it's only her person that's small. Her mind is big. She's an intellectual woman. Let's don't say much about her marital troubles. She's too unhappy with all the publicity she's had about her matrimonial affairs.

"Yes, Mary's curls were real. Blond curls, just as beautiful hair in reality as the screen pictured. Her skin very clear and white. Her eyes brown.

"Something I'm sure isn't known about Mary Pickford is her orphanage near Los Angeles. This is only one of her outlets for her strong maternal and philanthropic impulses.

"Did you know that only through determined study with tutors Mary Pickford educated herself? She never went to a school in her life. Her childhood was spent in jumping from town to town in one-night-stand shows with her parents.

"As far back as 1920 Mary had mastered foreign languages. She spoke French fluently. Talked only in French with her maid and read many French books."

Then from reminiscences of "America's Sweetheart," the busy legislator turned to arrange committee hearings on his milk investigation resolution.

Gives Congresswomen a Gallant Hand

From a vantage point of 84 years, Representative Clement Cabell Dickinson, of Missouri, oldest member of Congress, regards the feminine members of the House and finds them not only capable and hard-working, —but less talkative than men.

Post-Easter Hits Announced for Local Screens—Death Claims Gracious Star

Warner Office Discloses Six Notable Films

Film World Grieves Death of "Lil" Tashman; Bits of Theater News.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Warner Brothers' Earle Theater is the first of the local picture houses to step out with a definite announcement of six post-Easter screen attractions of presumably superior merit.

Beginning with Easter week, Friday, March 30, John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, gives assurance that his ace downtown, first-run theater will present, in the order named, Al Jolson's screen version of his stage hit, "Wonder Bar," in which he is supported by Kay Francis, Dolores Del Rio, Ricardo Cortez, Dick Powell, Fifi D'Orsay and a host of others, and these additional winners:

Barbara Stanwyck in "Gambling Lady," with Joel McCrea, C. Aubrey Smith, Pat O'Brien and a hand-picked cast in support.

"As the Earth Turns," the screen version of Gladys Hasty Carroll's simple tale of life through the four seasons on a New England farm—or rather several adjoining New England farms. This is such a homely and unembellished piece of writing on the succession of the seasons that I have frequently wondered in what manner it might be converted into a photoplay in which there would be the slightest suggestion of conflict or dramatic action. There is little enough in the book. As straight narrative, however, it is superb.

Goes Places.

From all reports, the picture manages to get somewhere dramatically and will be additionally interesting to Washington audiences because it will mark the screen debut of Donald Wood, former leading man of Mr. Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players, long may they wave.

"Registered Nurse," marking the return to the Warner lot of Bebe Daniels, who will be supported by Lyle Talbot, John Halliday, Gordon Westcott, Dorothy Burgess, Minna Gombell, Sidney Toler and "Fuzzy" Knight.

Last of the six, "Melody in Spring" the picture for which Lanny Ross, one of the favorite tenors of the most popular hours on the air, deserted radio to become a film star. Included in his supporting cast will be Ann Sothern, who just scored with Edmund Lowe in "Let's Fall in Love"; Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland, both of whom were seen to such fine advantage in "Six of a Kind."

Speaking of Edmund Lowe, it is with feelings of deep sorrow and a sense of personal loss that we learn of the shocking and untimely death of his charming wife, Lilyan Tashman, yesterday afternoon.

Miss Tashman's last personal visit to the Capital was two years ago next month, when she was here for a week of personal appearances at the Rialto. Shortly afterward Eddie came along for a similar engagement at Loew's Fox. Both we found alert, witty and engaging companions.

Miss Tashman arrived in Washington on one of the worst days in the year—rainy, snowy, sleety and sloppy. Much had occurred that Saturday morning to ruffle her usually gay spirit. Nevertheless, in a long visit in her dressing room, at breakfast the next morning at the Shoreham and on subsequent meetings this column found a great deal to admire and respect in the character of a young woman whose reputation has been based too preponderantly upon her penchant for sartorial elegance.

"Lil" Tashman, as she was familiarly known to her friends, was a grand girl—smart, witty, intelligent and not at all so "high hat" as many tried to make her out. It was this common view, I think, that made Eddie Lowe and me such good friends on such short notice when he followed Lilyan to town the same summer. She was not unknown to Washington, having played here with Ina Claire in "Gold Diggers" and in stock at the Belasco.

My deepest and sincerest sympathy goes out to Eddie now in what to him is a crushing sorrow.

"——In The Woodpile."

Devious are the ways of the publicist. Some, as a matter of fact, are deviouser than others. Take, for example the case of the young—or maybe he is old, for all I know—postcard writer who has been plastering the town with bogus recommendations of a musical effort soon to be pulled off at Eastern High School.

The matter comes to my attention because late yesterday my erudite and esteemed contemporary, Mr. Edward De Selding Meicher, of the Evening Star, called up to ask if I had mailed a postal. Following the good old American custom of answering one question with another, I inquired if he had sent me one. Neither of us, as it turned out, had sent the other anything.

Yet on my desk reposes a card purportedly signed—this would be in typewriting—by "Eddie" and on his a practically identical missive pretending to have been signed by "Nelson."

Not only that, but Miss Alice Eversman, music critic of The Star, also received a "Dear Alice" postage card from a comparative stranger and, altogether, the thing looks decidedly and unequivocally phoney—as it most emphatically is.

Our Mr. Ray Brown, music critic of The Post, seems, so far, to have escaped the attentions of the anonymous interloper, but it may be no later than the next mail that his turn will come.

It is a pretty cheap trick, everything considered, and will redound to nobody's favor, especially if the postal card writer's identity ever becomes known—which it pretty thoroughly is already!

The Columbia Players, winners of the last District one-act play tournament, will present "The First Mrs. Fraser," a comedy-drama by St. John Ervine, British critic and playwright, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, on April 17 and 18. Gerald Miller, who earlier in the season produced "Icebound," will direct.

"Treasure Island."

"Treasure Island," Robert Louis Stevenson's world-famed classic of adventure, beloved of children and grown-ups in both hemispheres, will be presented in dramatic form at Roosevelt auditorium for three performances, Friday and Saturday, April 6 and 7, by the Washington Community Players, who are noted hereabouts for their successful and engaging presentation of another famous classic, Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," at the Washington Monument last summer, and since that time at Central High School auditorium and at the University of Virginia.

The dramatic version to be used by the local players for their production of "Treasure Island" is that written by Jules Eckert Goodman for the Punch and Judy Theater, in New York City, in 1915, and which later was equally successful as presented at the Heckscher Foundation in New York City for many weeks.

Elizabeth Gatlin Pritchard, who was associated with the Heckscher Foundation presentations, will direct the rehearsals of "Treasure Island" here, and will be assisted by George Farrington, who until recently was director of the Charlotte, N. C., Little Theater.

Acknowledgments.

A cordial note from Henry C. Nestor, "the singing cop," which is much appreciated. . . . Loew's Fox

Those rollicking roisterers of "What Price Glory," Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe, again continue their screen battles in the hilarious "No More Women," which is the screen attraction at Loew's Fox starting tomorrow, together with a stage bill dominated by Phil Spitalny and his orchestra of 32 versatile girl musicians.

"No More Women" is a provocative and highly refreshing story of this "sez-you' sez-me" duo, who are seen as a couple of red-blooded men who are deep-sea-diving rivals by day and rival Romeos by night, who clout and caress their way through a series of fast and funny romances and adventures. The feminine lure for this Quirt-Flagg combine is provided by Sally Blane and Minna Gombell.

Supporting Phil Spitalny, who presents a diverting novelty in the 32 comely musician-maidens, are the Three Slate Brothers, madcap novelty dacers; Pete, the almost human dog of "Our Gang Comedies," and Lee Murray and the Sinclair Twins in a modernistic dancing revue.

An overture by the Fox Orchestra, Phil Lampkin conducting; news events and short subjects complete the entertainment.

Earle

Warner Bros. Earle Theater for the week starting tomorrow will bring to Washington Jimmy Cagney's newest laugh riot, "Jimmy the Gent," and the personal appearance of Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey, radio favorites.

"Jimmy the Gent," a hilarious comedy romance, concerns two crooks who are both trying to expose the other to impress the girl they both love. The story unveils in humorous vein the unique racket of heir chasing—that is, the hunting down of lost heirs, in order to inherit unclaimed estates. And the two notorious heir chasers, James Cagney and Alan Dinehart, do not stop at bribing persons to act as heirs and coaching them into perjured testimony.

Bette Davis is the feminine lead opposite Cagney, and the girl over whom Cagney and Dinehart do battle. Alice White, Allen Jenkins and Mayo Methot are said to supply much of the comedy element although the fast-talking and fast-acting Jimmy always turns up with his share.

The stage portion of the bill will be headed by Mr. Sims and Miss Bailey, the favorite radio song and piano team, making their first Washington stage appearance in an offering entitled "Modern Song Presentations." Other acts are A. Robins, the walking music store; Sidney Page and his "Pages of Fun" and the six Danwills, Ringling Bros. circus stars.

Specially selected short subjects, the newsreel and the Earle orchestral prelude will complete the bill.

Rialto

From the scenes in Ohio to the ones in California, when the finding of a gold tooth-filling starts a wild rush for mining riches, "Love Birds," which opens today at the Rialto Theater, is one long series of hilarious situations, loaded to the brim with comedy and laughter.

The stars are that incomparable team, "Slim" Summerville and ZaSu Pitts. Clarence Marks and Dale Van Every have fashioned a story that provides these comedians with a perfect setting for their antics. Doris Anderson did the screen treatment.

William Seiter directed "Love Birds," including in the supporting cast such players as Mickey Rooney, Frederick Burton, Emmet Vogan, Dorothy Christy, Maude Eburne, Hugh Enfield, Arthur Stone, Ethel Mandell, Gertrude Short, Clarence H. Wilson and John T. Murray.

The Rialto supplements the presentation of "Love Birds" with a carefully selected list of shorter screen subjects and the latest Universal News, with Graham McNamee in his role of Talking Reporter.

Metropolitan

For the week starting tomorrow Warner Bros. Metropolitan will present another of the two-and-a-half-hour shows which have become the talk of show-shopping Washington. The feature of the program is "Once to Every Woman," starring Ralph Bellamy and Fay Wray.

"Once to Every Woman" is a screen version of A. J. Cronin's "Kaleidoscope in K," which appeared as a novelette in a popular magazine last year. Those who are familiar with the story will remember how the lives of some dozen persons became fatefully enmeshed in the love affair of a beautiful and highly talented young woman. This Mary Fanshawe, as portrayed by Fay Wray, becomes a vivid, living character, experiencing, at first, a romance that was predestined for failure, but revelling later in the consolation of a greater, stronger love.

Fay Wray's admirers have much to be thankful for, since she wisely forsook playing "enamorata" to a host of ghosts and monsters and turned, instead, to more intelligent and mature characterizations, such as the ones she has recently portrayed. Featured in the large cast with Miss Wray are Ralph Bellamy, Walter Byron, Mary Carlisle, Walter Connolly, Katherin Clare Ward, J. Farrell MacDonald and Rebecca Wassam.

The short subject program consists of 15 minutes of newsreels, depicting the world's latest news events; an interesting novelty reel "Society Cheaters," starring the wizards of bridge, Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson; "Broadway Knights," a Paramount headliner comedy, starring the Yacht Club Boys; a Newman Traveltalk Film, "Jerusalem the Holy City," and Vincent Lopez and his band in a novelty musical reel.

Palace

"Eskimo Wife Traders," one of the strangest love stories ever unfolded on the screen, is the attraction booked for Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow.

W. S. Van Dyke, who brought the thrilling "Trader Horn" to the screen, led an adventurous film expedition into the Arctic to direct this epic of love.

This is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture that was nearly two years in the making and presents an all-native cast.

Columbia

Ann Harding, in a role typically suited to the sweep and power of her acting abilities, comes to Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow in "Gallant Lady." This stirring film is being returned following a notable run at Loew's Fox.

An exceptionally fine supporting cast includes Clive Brook, Tullio Carminati, Otto Kruger, Dickie Moore and Janet Beecher. Gregory La Cava directed from an original story by Gilbert Emerey and Douglas Doty.

"Gallant Lady" tells a poignant story of an unwed mother who is forced to give up her child at birth and her dramatic battle to recapture him.

News events, a comedy and short subjects are also on the program.

District Bans Ticket Sales By Policemen

Hazen Declares Citizens Feel Obligated to Buy.

Firemen Are Included; "Ad" Solicitation Halted.

Sale of tickets or solicitation of advertising by policemen and firemen will be prohibited under an order to be issued this week by the District Commissioners, who believe the practices involve an element of coercion.

The order is expected to prevent the annual ball game between the police and firemen for benefit of the Police and Firemen's Retirement Fund. Both Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown and Fire Chief C. E. Schrom are opposed to the game, Commissioner Hazen said.

"The order," Commissioner Hazen said, "is for the benefit of citizens. When a policeman goes to a citizen to sell a ticket, frequently the fact that he wears a badge makes the citizen feel that he is obliged to buy a ticket. I think the practice is another type of a hold-up."

Tells Own Experience.

Hazen told of an instance in which a policeman tried to sell him some tickets.

"I was driving down Connecticut avenue and a policeman stopped me and said: 'You're driving a little fast, aren't you?' Then he handed me two tickets to a ball game."

This was before he became Commissioner, he said.

The order will prohibit policemen from selling tickets for any function of the Washington Police Post of the American Legion, even for a charitable purpose. It will apply also to the solicitation of advertising for the official magazine of the Legion Post, the Police Post.

Business Manager Ousted.

Less than two years ago the business manager of the paper, who was not a member of the department, was relieved of his position after several complaints had been received by Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke regarding solicitation methods of the publication's advertising men.

The annual police-firemen ball game is favored strongly by Odell S. Smith, chairman of the public order committee of the Board of Trade. The police and fire chiefs base their opposition on the fact that citizens resent the efforts to sell tickets.

There is an exception in the order, however, under which the Commissioners may on special occasions permit ticket sales. Trial-Board action will follow if the terms of the order are violated, Hazen said.

Army Day Rites For Nation Set

April 6 Is Designated and Officially Indorsed.

Under auspices of the Military Order of the World War, the Nation will observe Army Day April 6. Official indorsements of the ceremonies, which will take place in the leading cities of the country, have been given by President Roosevelt and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the Army.

"Army Day brings to me once again the opportunity of testifying to the high regard that the Army holds for the Military Order of the World War," a communication from Gen. MacArthur stated yesterday.

"The members of your organization displayed, in the greatest war of all history, qualities of leadership that brought them into positions of responsibility and distinction. During the succeeding years they have continued to exhibit an unflagging interest in our country's welfare, which has earned for the order an enviable reputation and made it a distinct National asset."

California Alumni Banquet.

The Washington Chapter of the University of California Alumni Association will hold its annual Charter Day banquet at 6:30 p. m. today in the Cosmos Club. Dr. Joseph F. Rock, explorer, who led a plant hunting expedition in Yunnan, will be the guest speaker.

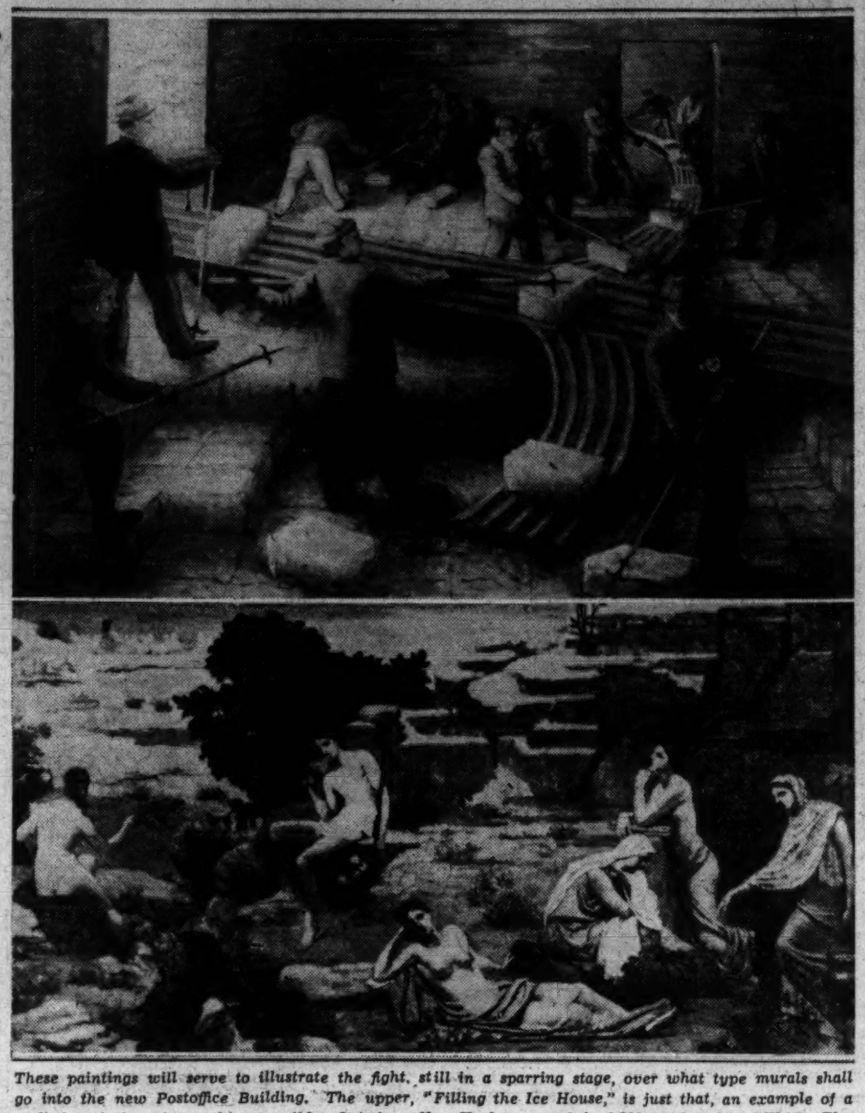
Classicism or Realism? That's the Question In Paintings for New Postoffice Building



These paintings will serve to illustrate the fight, still in a sparring stage, over what type murals shall go into the new Postoffice Building. The upper, "Filling the Ice House," is just that, an example of a realistic painting of something tangible. It is by a New Yorker, one of the 2,500 employed by PWAP. The other is an allegorical or symbolical work by a classic French painter. Which do you prefer?

West Virginia Tax Conferees Agree on Bill

Early Adjournment Seen as End of Long Fight on Levies Nears.

Charleston, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Early adjournment of the extra session of the West Virginia Legislature, possibly by tomorrow night, was forecast tonight following a report to the House by Delegate A. J. Lubliner, chairman of its Taxation and Finance committee, that the Senate and House conferees on the emergency revenue measure had reached a compromise.

The new bill will be ready for presentation tomorrow. It calls for a 2 per cent consumers' sales tax without exemptions and an increase of 50 per cent in the present tax rates on utilities and other corporations for the next two years.

The House had contended for a 2 per cent sales tax with exemptions for foodstuffs and other necessities, as against a stand for a 3 per cent sales tax by the Senate with no exemptions. The House also stood for a 20 per cent luxury tax, but this form of tax was turned down altogether by the Senate and in the compromise it was omitted.

The Senate sought an increase of only 20 per cent upon the corporation taxes, while the House bill called for an increase of 60 per cent. The 50 per cent agreement was reached with the proviso that the taxes should apply only for the two-year period. The Senate had cut the limitation to one year.

Gov. H. G. Kump threw his influence behind the House plan. An alternative plan calling for depletion taxes on natural resources along with luxury and other taxes was discarded.

Apple Blossom Festival Outlined

Winchester, Va., March 22 (Spl.). A citizens' mass meeting will be held here tonight to hear plans for the annual Apple Blossom Festival.

W. E. Cooper, chairman of the festival committee, will introduce visitors representing transportation lines. J. Pinkney Arthur, director general, will outline this year's event.

Among those to attend are P. G. Hoskins, general superintendent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and Thomas B. Kennedy, superintendent of the Cumberland Valley division of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Winter's Over, Ukase Of White Groundhog

Harrisonburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Winter's backbone has been broken! At least, that is the forecast of a white groundhog owned by Euart Eavy, a State highway worker in Rockingham County.

This captive albino groundhog went to sleep February 2 and a few days ago it rolled over, shook itself and is now scampering around in its pen.

Head of Public Works of Art Says There'll Be No Nudes.

But Strong Opposition Holds Out for Beauty in the Raw.

Which shall it be—a nude lady leaning against a symbolical mailbox and holding a scroll in her hand or a red-blooded Pony Express rider frapping his horse's flanks with the whooping Indians about to catch up?

While this is not a specific case, it represents pretty accurately the bone of contention which is standing in the way of mural painting in the new Postoffice Department Building. Delano & Aldrich, staid New York architects who designed the structure, are for the nude lady. On the other side are Edward Bruce, director of 2,500 "unemployed" artists, and Silliman Evans, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General.

The whole business started something like this: It was found that $250,000 of the $10,000,000 or so appropriated for the building was unexpended. Largely through the zeal of jolly Ned Bruce, the quarter million was made available to his public works of art project for decorative purposes.

Now all is in readiness to start on sketches and designs for the 100 murals and paintings planned but there seems to be a difference of opinion over what shall be painted. Not only what, but how.

"I don't want any picture of ladies in cheesecloth clutching letters and postcards, to go into that building," Bruce said yesterday.

If you want to portray an Alaskan dog team carrying the mail, paint an Alaskan dog team carrying the mail. That's Bruce's point of view. It's American, the real thing. More to be desired than the European idea of a buxom and undraped female waving a palm leaf, which is to be interpreted into the evolution of the air mail.

William A. Delano and Chester H. Aldrich have done a superb job on the Postoffice, admitted, and have every right to say their piece about how the building's interior shall be decorated, but Bruce thinks they're all wrong in holding out for classical and symbolical paintings instead of rugged, literal ones.

Bruce dug through a pile of papers and produced a newspaper photo showing a mural intended for the new Department of Agriculture Building. It revealed a lady, wound around with what the PWAP chief calls cheesecloth, seated against a sheaf of wheat. At her feet reclined another lady, without cheesecloth, and there were several other unclothed ladies sprinkled around to form a court of honor.

Ned Bruce unleashed a barrage of uncomplimentary comments which might be summed up in one word: Nuts.

It is proposed to paint the murals on the walls of two circular stairways and on seven floors in the walled openings facing the elevators.

But first they will have to choose between clasical nudes and realistic characters.

Maybe it ought to be left to the public to decide. After all, the public will have to look at the art.

Coroners Free Man Who Slew Gangster Pair

Kelley Is Exonerated by Testimony He Shot in Self-Defense.

Joseph Kelley, who shot and killed two Washington gangsters during a holdup attempt in a Baltimore confectionery store March 11, was exonerated yesterday by Coroners Otto M. Reinhardt and Joseph L. Valentini.

The men, who tried to rob Kelley and Willis M. King, Baltimore sportsman, were Benjamin H. Kivitz, alias Harry Davis, and James Collins, alias Milton Scott, both known in underworld circles of Washington and Baltimore.

Kelley testified that he and King were talking near a door of the store when they saw an automobile with four men passing by slowly. The car stopped and three men walked into the store, leaving the other outside the door.

"I saw a gun coming toward my face," he testified.

Kivitz approached Kelley with a drawn gun, it was testified, while Collins menaced King.

"I shot both almost at the same time," Kelley said. Collins died on the floor, but Davis succumbed at St. Agnes Hospital.

Davis was arrested as a suspect in the slaying of Milton (Milsie) W. Henry, Washington gambler. Charles Harris, later convicted of the crime, is now in the District Jail awaiting electrocution.

Virginia U. Bursar Talks to Kiwanis

Sees Peril to Youth in Future Leisure.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—With warning of dangers to the coming generation through changing economic conditions, E. I. Caruthers, bursar of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, and governor of the Capital District, Kiwanis International, in an address to the Harrisonburg Kiwanis Club today, called on Kiwanians to expand their boys' and girls' work to include a program among high school students that "honesty pays," to teach them how to use profitably their leisure time and to inaugurate a campaign for youth to keep the family budget.

Mr. Caruthers predicted the next generation will not be compelled to work more than five or six hours a day, and said it is important to train boys and girls how to use leisure. He said Kiwanis clubs should make a study of the employment problem, with the hope of assisting youngsters of today.

Mr. Caruthers suggested Kiwanis clubs offer prizes to high school students for the best letters on "Why Honesty Pays."

Lorton Probe Fails to Find Guilt Exists

Slight Basis Uncovered for Charges of Shoemaker.

Barnard's Record Wins Praise; Bishoff Is Vindicated.

All persons involved in the Lorton Reformatory investigation, including J. E. C. Bischoff, business manager, accused of making profits on outside work, were exonerated by the penal committee of the Board of Public Welfare yesterday.

The committee reported to the Commissioners that charges leveled against the prison administration by Representative Shoemaker, Farmer-Labor, of Minnesota, were unsustained and characterized them as "unjustified criticism and unsupported hearsay."

Bischoff, who admitted he had received fees from a concern with whom the District did business, has the confidence of the committee in his "absolute integrity and fidelity." The fees received by Bischoff were for consultative work during his free time, and on projects in which the District was not connected, the board ruled.

Allen Reported Satisfied.

Commissioner George E. Allen, although refraining from official comment, is known to be satisfied with the investigation.

The inquiry resulted from charges by Representative Shoemaker and Edward Bedell, a former convict, who charged that graft, immorality and special privileges to wealthy prisoners were rampant at Lorton.

To the charge that G. Bryan Pitts and Edmund Rheem, convicted financiers, had been given special privileges, the committee declared the accsations had been effectually disproved.

"One detail of these charges is that the two prisoners in question had been allowed on numerous occasions to leave the prison reservation and visit their wives in a hotel in Alexandria. If there were ever ground for a suspicion that this was true, and we think there was none, the suspicion would have rested upon an official no longer connected with the institution.

Barnard's Record Praised.

"We are of the opinion that none of the charges embraced in the memorandum from the Acting Attorney General or those made on the floor of the House of Representatives, so far as they relate to District institutions, is sustained or is sustainable in any particular.

"We are further of the opinion that the administration and conduct of the penal institution by Capt. Barnard and his aids, Col. W. L. Peak, superintendent of the reformatory; Capt. Arthur T. Pettitt, superintendent of the workhouse; Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the jail, and Mr. J. E. C. Bischoff has been efficient and highly commendable. We have discovered nothing to impeach the integrity and efficiency of any of their subordinates."

In conclusion the committe said: "In the retirement of Capt. Barnard, which the weight of years will make imperative in the not distant future, the District will lose the services of a faithful and efficient official who has a long and honorable record of service." The report was made by the committee composed of W. W. Millan, chairman; Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, M. M. Doyle and F. W. McReynolds.

Representative Shoemaker, who charged the inquiry would result in a "whitewash," intends to press for a Congressional investigation.

29 Nations Represented at Informal Parley on Child Welfare.

A colorful gathering of Girl Scouts from 29 nations yesterday attended a tea at the Little House, 1750 New York avenue northwest, to discuss mutual interests in child welfare, education and social service. Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, was the guest of honor.

Wives of ambassadors and their children affiliated with the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts gathered and discussed international problems of interest to Girl Scouts. The World Association was founded by the Right Hon. Lord Baden-Powell in 1928, with headquarters maintained in London.

The Girl Scouts who attended and the countries they represented were Virginia Smith, Denmark; Jane Austin, Greece; Helen Cruikshank, South Africa; Ruth Lamborn, Belgium; Mary Porter Couden, Finland; Patricia Prochnik, Poland; Denyse Rizik, France; Medeline Rizik, Japan; Mary Broz, Czechoslovakia; Elizabeth Fish, Sweden; Henrietta Bowne, Puerto Rico; Carol Franklin, Canada; Louise Crosby, Great Britain; Lucy Clagett, Egypt; Mildred Vierling, United States and Strattan Nicholson, United States.

Ritchie, Cousin Of Governor, Expires Here

Former Judge Served in D. C. Government for 30 Years.

John Ritchie, Jr., cousin of Gov. Ritchie of Maryland and chief clerk of building inspectors of the District for 30 years, died yesterday at his residence, 1730 Church street northwest. He retired last September.

Mr. Ritchie was born in Frederick, Md., son of the late Judge John and Bettie Maulsby Ritchie. Educated at Frederick Academy, he studied and practiced law until he was appointed judge of the United States Court in Indian Territory. He occupied the bench five years.

He is survived by his widow, Edith Kensett Ritchie, of Baltimore; a son, Prof. John Ritchie 3d, of the University of Washington; two brothers, Albert Ritchie, of New Rochelle, and Roger Ritchie, of Frederick; five sisters, Mrs. Allan Boyd, of Washington; Mrs. William Bouldin, of East Orange, N. J.; Mrs. David Winebrenner, of Frederick, and Mrs. David Banks and Mrs. Justus Dunott, of Baltimore.

He was an uncle of David C. Winebrenner 3d, secretary of state of Maryland.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

State Office Sees $1,500,000 Deficit

Highway Department Hit by Auto Tax Art.

Richmond, March 22 (AP).—The end of the fiscal year June 30 will find a deficit of $1,500,000 in the State highway department, Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley said yesterday, because of the General Assembly's reducing of revenues from automobile licenses by more than $1,760,000.

Without this reduction, Mr. Shirley said, the department would have shown a balanced budget, despite expenditures authorized by the Governor.

The year got off to a bad start, the commissioner explained, through postponement of the deadline for automobile license taxes from December to May 1 last year, and the actual loss of $1,400,000 in revenue when the expiration date of 1932 licenses was moved forward three months.

Parking Ban On F Street Is Ordered

Traffic Director Decides on "Experiment" Tomorrow.

Success of Plan Likely to Result in New Restricted Areas.

An "experimental" plan, under which all parking along downtown F street will be banned tomorrow afternoon, was announced yesterday by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

The order followed complaints of Saturday afternoon traffic congestion. Parking on both sides of F street between Ninth and Fourteenth streets northwest will be prohibited from 12 to 6 p. m.

"The plan is merely an experiment," the traffic director said. "Should it prove successful we will consider adoption of a permanent regulation."

Van Duzer refused to comment on the ultimate abolition of all downtown parking. He indicated, however, that if the "experiment" is a success, additional downtown areas may come under the Saturday parking ban.

Other changes in traffic regulations also were announced. They included the converting of I street, formerly one-way from Massachusetts avenue to Tenth street northwest, into a two-way street.

Parking will be prohibited on the north side of I street from Eleventh street to Massachusetts avenue and on the south side between Eleventh and Eighth streets northwest.

With the exception of rush-hour periods, M street, from Thirteenth street to Thomas Circle, also will be opened to two-way traffic.

Virginians Hear About Gold Mines

Fredericksburg Club Told of Rapidan Work.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Gold mining operations in this area were outlined before the Kiwanis Club last night.

Dr. J. Lee Cooke, owner of the property on which is located the Rapidan Gold Mining Corporation's mine, reviewed operations on the property, in which he declared $100,000 has been invested. Dr. Arthur Bevan, of Charlottesville, State geologist, reviewed the history of gold mining in Virginia since 1780, and illustrated the wealth of Virginia mines by reading a Philadelphia Mint report indicating receipt of $1,800,000 from one Old Dominion mine.

Moritz Norden, an engineer of the Rapidan corporation, explained the concern's work to the club. He stated 62 men are working three shifts of eight hours every day.

Virginia Liquor Board Gets 12 Seized Cases

Richmond, March 22 (AP).—Virginia's alcoholic beverage control board, which took office today, immediately found itself in possession of 12 cases of whisky, obtained via the confiscation route.

State Police Officer Lohr last night stopped an automobile in Chesterfield County and seized the beverage, which purported to be bottled in bond. With the prohibition regime ended at midnight, he was advised by R. MacC. Bullington, a member of the board which takes over the control functions today, to take it to the county courthouse for safekeeping until the board can decide what to do with it.

Bobby Trails Due to Poor Putting

'Jane' Done Him Wrong and Also Affected His Pitch Shots.

By Paul Gallico.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 22 (Spl.).—This day these eyes of mine have seen a dolorous sight, a lovers' quarrel that seems unreconciliable, the breaking up of a most happy and felicitous pair, the ending of a beautiful, beautiful friendship. Robert Tyre Jones, jr., and Calamity Jane have come to the parting of the ways.

It is the old, old story, but it hurts anew and I hate to bear witness to it again. It shatters my faith in mankind. She done him wrong. He slung her away and left her lying in the fields. Kind friends picked her up, the lovely goose-necked putter with the brown wood shaft and the four bands of black tape wrapped around the handle—mourning bands now—and restored her to her home in the bag.

She Done Him Wrong.

But it isn't the same any more. She done him wrong. I seen her do it. So did thousands of other spectators. It was all so public.

They tell me that this is not the original Calamity Jane, that this famous lady lies in a dusty case in a musee in the royal and ancient golf club at St. Andrews, in Scotland, and that the current bride is but a replica, one in whom he has ceaselessly and hopelessly been seeking the virtues of his first love. But Calamity Jane she is named and Calamity Jane she is—and his sweetheart no more. He took 35 putts on his round of 76 this morning and three-putted three greens. They had been having marital spats all the way around the course, but the quarrel finally grew out of hand on the eighteenth, where she thrust public ignominy on him with a miss of a 2-footer, resulting in a six on his card. It was at this point that he abandoned her in the grass and advised all and sundry that she had left his bed and board and he was no longer responsible for her debts.

Lady Not All to Blame.

I do not like to mix into family brawls but candor forces me to state that the lady is not entirely responsible for this deplorable rift between tried and trusted sweethearts. I thought I noticed a difference in Bob's attitude toward the lady, a taking-for-granted of her virtues, an impatience on the green, a lack of respect for her feelings in the careless manner in which he stepped to the ball, sighted it but once and then swung the putter, a difference in the loving touch of his fingers, a change in the old, true, smooth manner in which he used to caress her and the ball all in one smooth motion. I thought he acted a little like a husband for whom the first blush is off the rose.

Jones had a 76. Jones isn't putting. Jones isn't pitching. Unless Jones starts to putt he is as good as out of the tournament. He is as good as done for as a topflight competitor until he makes up with his love. His game isn't played forward from the drive as you might suspect, but backward from the putt. This is an interesting point and I will elaborate upon it.

Jones Isn't Putting.

The fact is that Jones isn't putting. He stands differently, he holds the putter differently, and he hits the ball differently. He is always off line or sliding past the hole or falling short. Therefore, he is frightened and discomfited on the putting green and in a state of extreme nervous tension. All his confidence is gone. When short of the green he knows that if his pitch shot doesn't roll up to the cup he will miss the putt. Immediately all of the pressure is moved on to the pitch, the delicate shot that he used to perform so perfectly that it looked miraculous and they called him a machine. Now the extra pressure has ruined the accuracy and sureness of his pitch. He played the wrist shots wretchedly this morning.

But the pressure reaches out even further. With the pitches not to be relied upon, he must get home in two, he must be letter perfect off the tee to put himself into position for the perfect second shot. You

The one time "Joplin Ghost" of golf posted a 70 yesterday to tie with Jimmy Hines and Emmett French for the lead in Bobby Jones' tournament which got under way yesterday.

Jones Needs a Few Rounds As Mental Aid, Says Runyan

Former Champion's Wood Play at Its Best, but Retirement Seems to Have Hurt Georgian's Confidence, Young Companion Declares.

[Editor's note: This is one of a series by Paul Runyan on the Masters Invitation Tournament, in which he is a favored contender. Runyan, the sensation of the winter circuit, played with Bobby Jones yesterday.]

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 22.—I have just finished playing the first round of the Masters Invitation Golf Tournament with Bobby Jones as a partner, and it was one of the most enjoyable days I have ever had on any course.

We started off with practically all of the spectators in our gallery, which only proved what everybody already knew—that Bobby is still the idol of the golfing world.

Before the tournament started I was of the opinion that Bobby's long stay in retirement would do something to his confidence under fire. I still feel that this is true, for he appeared very nervous, stopping on several occasions to wait impatiently for cameras to stop grinding and for the gallery to quiet down.

Fine Play With Wood.

Bobby's wood play was the finest I have ever seen. Long, straight drives and brilliant spoon and brassie shots. On the difficult par 5 fourth hole he hammered one of the greatest spoons ever hit, the ball carrying straight for the flag, and putting him in position to putt for an eagle 3. I was honestly sorry he missed it. On the 5 par eleventh, from a dismal hownhill lie, he hit a cut brassie high enough and long enough to carry the traps guarding the green 250 yards away, and the ball came to rest 6 feet from the pin.

Bobby's score was 76, which was entirely due to his erratic work around the greens, both in chipping and putting. After repeatedly hitting fine wood and iron shots to the greens, he would fail to get down his putts. And when a green was missed, making a chip shot necessary, he was a bit at sea.

The Atlantan is still a master shot-maker, but needs a few rounds under his belt to get into his best competitive frame of mind.

My own game was going along smoothly with three easy pars on the first three holes and a shaky par 5 on the fourth. I then settled down nicely for four pars through the eighth which, coupled with a birdie 3 at the ninth, gave me a 35, one under par, for the outgoing nine.

Became Unsteady.

My field shots on the incoming nine were uniformly good with the exception of a spade shot at the twelfth, which was too strong, and a miss-hit shot with the same club to the eighteenth. My chipping and putting, however, became highly unsteady coming home, costing me a stroke to par on the fourteenth and sixteenth.

Some may attribute my poor work around the greens to excitement caused by playing with the master of them all, Bobby Jones, but that's not true. I felt at ease at all times. He is a most considerate partner, and his magnificent play with his woods an inspiration.

Unfortunately, Bobby and I didn't do much today to further our chances of winning from such a fast field, but one can never tell. Tomorrow we may get red-hot and go out in front of the pack.

Yanks Win; Ruth Hits Two Homers

Gehrig Also Slams One; Newark Bows, 8-6.

Clearwater, Fla., March 22 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth today blasted two home runs over the right field fence, driving in half of the New York Yankees' runs as they beat the Newark Bears, 8 to 6, for their fifth straight victory.

Ruth's slugging mate, Lou Gehrig, also contributed a homer.

Ruth made his first four-bagger in the big opening inning. He scored Heffner and Rolfe ahead of him. The Yanks made five runs in this frame. The Babe hit for the circuit again in the fifth inning when he was first man up. Gehrig's homer came in the third with the bases empty.

MacFayden and Van Atta allowed the Bears 10 hits, while the Yanks collected nine off White and Makosky.

Pharatime Triumphs In Feature at Downs

Houston, Tex., March 22 (AP).—Pharatime, 3-year-old gelding owned by Joe Cattarinich, which has been campaigning in handicaps, today dropped down to a cheap claiming class and won the 6-furlong top event at Epsom Downs.

Ridden by the Cuban jockey, Guerra, Pharatime opened up a commanding lead early in the race and crossed the finish line with a length to spare over the well-played Risky Miss, carrying the silks of T. C. Worden. P. A. Shaw's Happy Surprise was third in the field of eight.

With 110 pounds in the saddle, Pharatime ran the distance in 1:13 1-5 and returned his backers $10.50 for $2.

Jones in Tie For 35th at Augusta contested that a triple tie decelopsd for the first 18 holes of the four-day 72-hole route. Dark horsemen were conspicuous in the vanguard as Emmett French, the veteran from Southern Pines, N. C., and Jimmie Hines, a long hitter from Timber Point, N. Y., shot into the lead with Horton Smith, of Chicago, the last pro to beat Jones in open competition, a feat he accomplished at Savannah in the spring of 1930. All three posted 70, 2 under par.

Nine Equal or Better Par.

Not all the favorites were so well situated but, altogether, there were nine professionals with par or better for the first round and consequent advantages of 4 to 6 strokes over Jones. Most of them burned up the course in more or less obscurity, however, for just about all of the 1,000 fans in the gallery pursued Bob and the young professional favorite, Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., who had a struggle himself to score a 74 to enjoy a 2-stroke lead over the former world champion.

Despite a taped left hand, which he sprained some time ago, the colorful Walter Hagen came through with a fine 71 to equal the scores previously posted by John Golden, of Noroton, Conn.; Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., and youthful Henry Picard, of Charleston, S. C., thereby making a four-way tie for fourth place. In a tie for eighth position were Ky Laffoon, the sensational Denver pro, and Bill Burke, of Cleveland, 1931 open champion of the United States, both with par 72s.

Others Near Top.

All except one of those finishing the day ahead of Jones were professionals, the lone amatcur being 18-year-old Willie Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., youthful member of a noted golfing family, who turned in a 75. Denny Shute, the British Open king, shared the 73 bracket with Leo Diegel, also from Philadelphia, and an outsider, Joe Paletti, of Chicago. Macdonald Smith, Willie MacFarlane, Bobby Cruickshank, Tom Creavy and Ed Dudley were in the big group of 74's, while no fewer than three Turnesas—Mike and Joe, in addition to Little Willie—were tied with Al Espinosa and Johnny Revolta at 75.

Strangely unfamiliar at such depths in golf standing was the name of Jones, who not only falled for the day, at least to strike any fear of his famous old putter, "Calamity Jane," which he contributed to the trophy room of the Royal and Ancient Club of Scotland after his retirement.

Misses Short Putts.

With only a model of the original to employ on the greens and the fine fighting edge seemingly gone from his game, Bob quite obviously and to his own chagrin putted himself out of the running, for the time being. He missed at least a half dozen putts that measured less than 6 feet and used to be easy enough for him to depend on dropping half the time. His short game with the niblick also was out of tune, with the result that unless he regains something approximating his former fine touch, he has not much hope now of giving the professionals a real battle down the stretch.

Otherwise, neither the gallery nor the critics could detect much that was wrong with Bob's comeback of golf. Having played the role of host up to the limit, it was perhaps to be expected that he would lack the urge and determination of his championship days. But from tee to green, with the wood or long iron, he was every bit the master of former days. He gambled with long carries that his companion and young champion, Runyan, refused altogether to risk, getting home on three of the course's longest holes with booming, accurate shots that had the gallery in wild applause.

Twice Jones had easy-looking putts for eagles, with his second shots only 4 feet from the cup on the 480-yard fourth and within 8 feet of the pin on the 525-yard eleventh. Both times he missed and had to be satisfied with birdies. Again he was home in two on the 500-yard seventeenth, but took three putts from 20 feet.

He had previously three-putted the fourteenth and he wound up ingloriously with a 6 on the last hole where he missed a chip shot completely from behind the green and then took three strokes with his putter to hole out from the edge.

Houghton Gets 77; Second Shots Hurt

Augusta, Ga., March 22 (Spl.). After navigating the first nine holes in the Masters tournament here today in par 36, Al Houghton, of the Kenwood Club, Washington, floundered on second shots to the green, taking ing 41 coming in for a total of 77.

Fred McLeod, another Washington entry, from the Columbia Club, clocked up 80 for the 18 holes, although hitting the ball well. His difficulty also lay in second shots to the greens.

Girls to Vie In National Diving

District A. A. U. Titles Will Be at Stake in Other Events.

FLANKED by a flock of District title affairs, the junior National A. A. U. 10-foot indoor diving championship for women will occupy the center of the stage in the "all-championship" swim meet to be held in the Shoreham's Venetian Pool tonight.

Lois Bates and Marie Duval, Washington's best, will be faced with outstanding out-of-town talent in the persons of Margaret Abramitis and Edna Schuber, of the Brooklyn Dragon Club; Claudia Eckert, of the Shawnee Country Club, Willamette, Ill., and Alma Doherty, unattached for Natick, Mass., a 10-year-old "dark pony."

Declared Improved.

Miss Abramitis competed in the junior National outdoor competition held here last summer, finishing fourth, but is declared greatly improved since that time. Her teammate, Edna Schuber, is a rapidly rising young star from the metropolitan area. Seventeen-year-old Claudia Eckert has been diving since she was knee high to a lowboard, winning her first medal at the age of 10. She now has 65 of the bangles indicative of supremacy both in the water and off the springboard.

One of the first things she did on entering Northwestern University last fall was to set a new pool record for the 40-yard sprint. Her 21.3 bit of water-churning shattered a seven-year mark of 23 minutes. She placed fifth to Katherine Rawls in the Olympic tryouts at Jones Beach, Long Island, two years ago and will again compete against her for the Senior National A. A. U. crown April 11 to 14 at the Lake Shore A. C.

Women's Finals.

In the supporting card, all involving District A. A. U. championships, all events for women tonight will be finals. In the men's events, finals will be held tonight only in the 220-yard free style and 220-yard breast stroke swims. The men's fancy diving and all other finals will be held tomorrow night in the same pool.

The meet starts at 8 o'clock. An admission of 40 cents will be charged for adults and children will be admitted for 25 cents.

Eight Dual Meets For Duke Golfers

State, Conference Play Also on Program.

Durham, N. C., March 22 (Spl.). A schedule of eight dual meets and participation in State and Southern Conference tournaments was announced today for the Duke University golf team of this spring.

The Blue Devil linksmen, State and Conference champions last year, will open their card by meeting N. C. State in Raleigh, Saturday, April 7.

The Southern Conference meet, held last year at Sedgefield, will be staged at Hot Springs, Va., this season for three days, beginning May 3. The schedule:

April 7, N. C. State, at Raleigh: 11, North Carolina, at Durham (individual play); 12, North Carolina, at Durham (final foursome play); 13, Washington and Lee, at Durham; 18, N. C. State, at Durham; 21, Davidson, at Davidson; 26, Davidson, at Durham; 28, Washington and Lee, at Lexington, Va.

May 3-4-5—Southern Conference meet at Hot Springs, Va.; 12, North Carolina State, meet at Durham; 19, North Carolina, at Durham.

Maid Diamonders Gather.

An important meeting of the Washington Maid Midget Baseball Team will be held tonight at 1310 Fourteenth street northwest at 7:30 o'clock. All members of last year's squad are requested to report.

Prim and Linke Pitch Today For Nats Against Cleveland

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 22.—A sudden change in Manager Joe Cronin's pitching plans for the Nats' game with Walter Johnson's Cleveland Indians here tomorrow was noted this afternoon when he announced that the Nats' hurling duties will be assigned to two rookies instead of three, who were scheduled to work in three-inning shifts.

When Cronin's predecessor in office in Washington, Johnson, brings his Cleveland charges to the Biloxi field, the game will be the medium of the first spring tests for two of the most promising of Washington's rookie pitching talent—Ray Prim, the former pride of Albany, and Ed Linke, the Chicago fat boy, who is endeavoring to diet his way back into the big leagues.

The assignment of Prim and Linke for tomorrow's game by Cronin is a tip-off on the esteem in which they are held by the Nats' manager. All spring they have been conceded to be forerunners in the battle among five pitchers to gain three open berths on the Nats' staff, and the Cleveland game affords them a powerful, or weak argument, as the case may be.

Three to Be Named.

The work of Prim and Linke is destined to clarify the rookie pitching situation for Cronin, who must select three pitchers to be retained by the club from among this pair, the venerable Alec McColl, Ed Chapman and the perennial rookie, Bobbie Burke.

All other rookie pitchers in camp are distinctly out of the running for a job with Washington during 1934 and will be exposed to the tender mercies of the Chattanooga Club, or given their outright release when camp is broken on April 4.

There will be something more than vaguely familiar about the Cleveland team that will meet the Nats with Johnson at the helm. Besides the former Washington pitching idol, the Nats will see three of their former colleagues in uniform—Roy Spencer behind the bat; Sam Rice in the outfield, and Coach Patsy Gharrity assisting Johnson.

Another focal point of interest will be Louis (Bozie) Berger, the former Tech High School and Maryland University star, who is drawing the particular attention of Johnson among the Cleveland rookies.

Year at New Orleans.

After a year's seasoning at New Orleans, the Indians' Southern Association farm, Berger has been brought up to the majors with the hope that he will adequately fill the second base gap caused by the trading of Bill Cissell to Boston. Of his fielding prowess there is no question, but as yet he has not hit often enough to dismiss from Johnson's mind all doubt that he will make good.

Remembering the disappointing start made by the Nats in the first two weeks of the season in 1933, Cronin is now obsessed with his plan for developing his club's pitching strength for peak duty at the outset.

"That's not the bunk, this idea that the pitchers are ahead of the hitters in the spring," said Cronin, "and I want to be in a position to take advantage of it. Our pitching at the start of the year will have a lot to do with our position in the race.

"The pitchers round into form much quicker than the hitters, who often require eight or ten weeks to attune their eyes to the ball. If my pitchers reach top form quickly and give the hitters some good pitching to look at in practice, it will help both, and that's why I'm rushing matters by working only two pitchers in a game instead of three."

Runs, Hits and Errors.

The Nats' game with the Hattiesburg, Miss., semi-pros next week was canceled . . . because Clark Griffith learned that there was no fence around the field . . . and admission fees would be extremely difficult to collect . . . The Nats are in the market for another talented pitcher, says Griffith . . . who thinks his club is protected by the best defensive catching in the league . . . with Luke Sewell and Moe Berg . . . and calls Berg the best throwing catcher in the majors . . . There are now three, strong silent men on the Washington team who speak only when spoken to . . . Schulte, Bluege and Stone . . . With the Nats betting that Schulte is the strongest guy in big league baseball . . . Al Schacht has been offered coaching jobs by Walter Johnson, of Cleveland, and Casey Stengel, of Brooklyn . . . but is wedded to the Nats . . . Joe Kuhel is the lobby cut-up . . . with his card tricks.

England Set For Grand National

Field of 24 Predicted; 5 U. S.-Owned Entries; Course Is Slow.

LIVERPOOL, England, March 22 (AP).—Forty-eight special and scores of regular trains from every point in the British Isles, and every other conceivable mode of transportation today began pouring a huge crowd into this city for the ninety-sixth running of the Grand National Steeplechase over the famous Aintree jumps tomorrow.

The field was reduced to five American-owned and 27 others of Great Britain and Europe's leading equine jumpers today by the scratching of Francolino, but it was not likely that Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller, the 11-to-1 choice, would lead more than 24 of them to the post at 3 p. m. (10 a. m. Eastern standard time.)

With the starters will ride the hopes of scores of people the world over. The lucky holders of a ticket in the Irish Sweepstakes on the horse that is first to reach the wire at the end of the 4½ miles will receive close to $150,000 each.

Sunshine, Showers Forecast.

The weather man promised sunshine with intermittent showers following a day of steady rain, but there was not much hope that the green turf would be fast for the big event.

John Hay Whitney, young American sportsman, landed at the airport shortly after noon from Cherbourg to lead an expected large American contingent, arriving in time to see his Double Crossed win the Stanley Steeplechase, feature of the inaugural program.

Whitney's Thomond II, although listed below Golden Miller, J. B. Snow's Delaneige, also American-owned, and W. Parsonage's Forbra, 1932 winner, in the betting, has won his last three races and carried strong sentiment around the track. He will have as a running mate, Lone Eagle II, an outsider.

Delaneige, badly beaten in his latest encounter with Golden Miller, also was well fancied, and from his trainer, G. Beeby, came the word that the veteran jumper had a very good chance. He finished fourth last year while Golden Miller tumbled early in the going.

Sorley Boy Is Hope.

Ivor Anthony, who trained Kellsboro Jack to win the 1933 running, had hopes of making it two straight with F. Ambrose Clark's Sorley Boy, a stablemate of last year's winner and the only other American horse given a change among the smallest field in recent years.

Probably the most philosophical of all the owners was M. D. Blair, whose Prince Cherry is the least regarded of the American horses.

"Prince Cherry is about the worst of the bad horses in the race," Blair said. "But when an animal like Tipperary Time (he beat the Kentucky-bred Billy Barton in 1928) can win, there's hope for anything. I'm running my old horse on his luck."

Gettysburg Is Beaten By New York Celtics

Frederick, Md., March 22 (Spl.).—New York Celtics, world's champion basket ball team, defeated Gettysburg (Pa.) Fleet Wings, professionals, before the largest crowd of the season at the State Armory here, 50 to 45. The Celtics took the lead at the start and were not pushed at any stage of the game. Pete Barry, veteran of 2,000 professional games, scored 16 points.

Clotho, in Feature, Credited With One of Two Track Marks Set at Tropical

Other Record Hung Up by Sabula

Sabula Lowers Figures for 1 1-16 Miles; Three Winners for Coucci.

TROPICAL PARK, March 22 (AP). Track records were equaled and broken again here this afternoon and Jockey Silvio Coucci, the Bronx Express, played a big part in the proceedings. Right after the quiet, swarthy New York Italian had ridden the long shot Crout Au Pot to victory in the third race, equaling the 6-furlongs track mark of 1:10 3-5, the same boy jumped into the saddle of C. V. Whitney's Clotho in the featured Dania Claiming Handicap and drove his mount home on top in 1:10 flat to further lower the record. It was Coucci's third triumph of the day, while he also was credited with two seconds.

Still another track record fell when J. E. Smallman's Sabula sped over the mile and a sixteenth distance of the fifth event in 1:43 flat, clipping three-fifths of a second off the mark set by Big Beau opening day.

Wins by Four Lengths.

The 4-year-old daughter of Macaw, ridden by Litzenberger, took the lead from Jamison after leaving the back stretch and breezed home by four lengths to pay $7.40. Live One closed rapidly to take the place from Jamison by a length and a half.

Clotho showed a sudden return to top form under Coucci's strong guidance in the feature. The son of St. Germans, beaten many times prior to this event, came from behind with a mighty rush and beat G. Riley's North Mill by a length, to return $28.50 straight. G. W. Ogle's Miney Myerson, the favorite, was third, a head farther back.

Miney Myerson, Golden Fate, Gift of Roses and North Mill combined to cause a terrific early pace, while Clotho was kept within striking distance on the inside to the far turn. Then Coucci swung Clotho to the outside approaching the stretch turn.

Clotho Wins Goings Away.

The Whitney 5-year-old charged on North Mill and Miney Myerson in the short stretch and won going away. Litzenberger did not appear to see Clotho coming along on the outside and was outridden in the final drive.

Crout au Pot, a J. E. Widener cast-off now in the silks of W. I. Newmarch, made her 1934 debut in the third race and rang up a surprise victory, equaling the track record for 6 furlongs—1:10 3-5. The filly beat Bartering Kate, the choice, by a neck to pay $43.30 and gave Jockey Coucci a double. Hernando was a well beaten third. Bartering Kate set the pace, while Crout au Pot was far back. Coucci shot the ultimate winner up fast on the outside leaving the backstretch and she caught the leader in the last few strides.

Hot Finish in Opener.

With Earl Porter cancelling all of his mounts and departing for Maryland, the players turned to other "hot riders." Coucci, one of these, put up a sterling ride on Mae Sweep to take the initial event by a length and a half. The place battle saw three horses noses apart, with Suspicious, Happy Scot and Dijonette finishing as named. Coucci rated Mae Sweep close to the pace and won going away. The winner returned $7.40.

Litzenberger took the sixth event astride the even money choice All Rowes to earn a double and foil Coucci's attempt to gain four victories. The latter had Spud on top for more than 6 furlongs, but succumbed to the challenge of All Rowes, the latter scoring by two lengths. St. Christopher was a good third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The most precious metal in the world is radium, but strange as it seems, it is useless. No use has ever been found for pure metallic radium. Nobody ever sees it, only one person ever extracted it in its pure state—she was Mme. Curie, its discoverer.

The "radium" that hospitals have, and which is used by physicians to treat cancer and other ailments is not pure radium—it is radium salts. This substance is a grayish compound, and bears about the same relation to radium that table salt bears to metallic sodium. Even then it is handled behind leaden shields lest its rays burn attendants.

Metallic radium in pure state is white—but to keep it in a pure condition it must be kept out of contact with air, water, or acids.

Strange as it seems, from the time the miners dig the ore to the time the radium is in actual use in the hospital or laboratory nobody ever sees it. Although the refining process is long and complicated it is stopped before the metal is obtained in its pure state. Good radium ore will yield about one one-hundred-fiftieth of an ounce of radium per ton. The price is $50,000 a gram, and there are only about 700 grams in the world.

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, March 22.

Dear Al:

Just call me "Three-a-Day" Bennings, fellow. I turned the trick again today. Mae Sweep, Sabula and All Rowes stepped down to collect the main end of purses. While in the back-slapping department, let's linger long enough to allow me to remind you that I deserve an assist on Clotho. I warned you that the Whitneyite was a sleeper. And then, didn't I help Moralist beat Bub McFarland by picking Bub McFarland to beat Moralist? Mike hasn't heard from his friend, Chief, for a few days. I hope the post-repeal pace isn't too hot for him. Good time Tropical Park, better time Bowie.

BILL.

First race—Vishnu had little in the way of racing luck last out and appears ready for a fast race. Hunter will do the booting. Dornoch figures right with the top one, but Sorenson in the saddle is too big a risk. Billies Orphan draws Litzenberger for the riding and will be dangerous if the others make mistakes.

Second race—Migrate is a solid as anything shown in this juvenile sprint. Jockey Stout should get this one home in time for the pay-off. Distracting probably will go well. Sadie N for the show.

Third race—Bernie K appears to have found the spot where he can graduate from the maiden ranks with flying colors. Bert Lahr for the place and Hosain to show. The last named is not the worst horse in training.

Fourth race—Don't Blush gets in this with only 105 pounds and I understand Coucci will be in charge of the riding. We may get as much as 8 to 1. Claremont and Wedding Ring for the other awards.

Fifth race—Renewed is getting to be something of a Florida champion. I expect Litzenberger to get a lot of speed out of this one tomorrow. Impeach and Islam appear to have the edge on the others.

Sixth race—Mint De Mie will have the hard-riding Meade in charge tomorrow and this pair should take care of this field. Sequoia and Try Fair for the place and show.

Seventh race—Just Fun will have Whitey Abel, the owner and jockey, in the pilot house. This horse has been carefully nursed with a killing in mind. Tomorrow is the day. El Puma's last was a honey. High Socks for the rest.

Annapolis Host To Riflemen Tomorrow

Maryland, G. W. and G. U. Among 14 Schools in Competition.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 22 (Spl.). — Approximately 100 young men, representing the best rifle shots in 14 universites and colleges of the East, will be the guests of Naval Academy athletic authorities Saturday for the sectional intercollegiate championships to be contested over the academic indoor range. The match will be under auspices of the National Rifle Association and shooting will be with small bore rifles.

The team of Midshipmen has completed a preliminary season without a reverse and stands in good stead to land regional honors. George Washington University and other strong teams were among their victims. The Colonials will be among the competitive teams Saturday, and other institutions represented will be University of Maryland, Georgetown, Lehigh, Brooklyn Tech (two teams), Johns Hopkins, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Drexel Institute, Cornell, Columbia, University of Pennsylvania, Penn State and Carnegie Tech.

All told, 35 institutions will be in competition, four other regional meets having been arranged as follows: Connecticut State College for New England and New York metropolitan region, University of Illinois for Western Conference, University of Cincinnati for Alleghany sector and University of Nebraska for the Missouri Valley.

The marksmanship contest, together with fencing matches with Varsity and Freshmen teams of University of Pennsylvania, will ring down the curtain on the extensive program of winter indoor athletics for the Midshipmen.

Traction Team Booking.

Capital Transit tossers, who played under the Capital Traction banner last season, want to book Saturday and Sunday games, at home or away. Call Adams 0538-J. The team will drill Sunday at 10 a. m. on the Reservoir field.

Stocks Point Upward Again In Quiet Rally

Turnover, however, was not much more than 1,000,000 shares.

In stocks, sluggish firmness through the morning and early afternoon, encouraged the list to a mild last-hour mark-up, and leading issues were up fractions to more than 2 points net.

Auto News Scarce.

News bearing on the automobile conference was scarce during market hours, but traders seemed disposed to be hopeful of a settlement and shorts doubtless did some covering against the possibility of favorable eventualities.

Motor shares were fairly active at higher levels, Nash, General Motors and Chrysler improving a point or so. Steels made about as good a showing, while metals developed considerable strength. Numerous rails were up 1 to 2, which Wall street took as their response to news that Coordinator Eastman was to arbitrate difficulties between workers and managers.

Mining shares had little to work on that was definite. U. S. Smelting, still the leader, got assistance from a $1 extra dividend and the report on earnings. Last year netted $6.68 a share for the common stock against 62 cents in 1932, while for January and February of this year the company made $1.18 a common share, contrasted with 1 cent a year ago. The stock gained nearly 5 net.

Alaska Juneau Gains.

Alaska Juneau, which retained the customary 15 cent extra disbursement, gained slightly, but Dome, McIntyre, American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco rose 1 to 2. The market's average gain was 1.5 points in a volume of 1,054,250 shares; in the fourth hour only 90,000 shares changed hands.

French exchange continued firm, the franc touching a new high since devaluation of the dollar and reaching a level where the American unit's premium had virtually disappeared.

With the gold drain on the Bank of France halted—there was another gain in the last statement—and the French political situation calmer, it is probable capital has been returning to Paris.

Wall street naturally noted the renewed attack on the security exchange bill as it appears in revised form. There may have been some hopes that further modifying alterations would be made, but the concensus of opinion in the financial community seems to be that there will be "teeth" in the measure when it finally emerges from the legislative hopper.

Question Before Automobile Workers Should Be One of Forming an Industrial Union, Not Joining Forces With Green to Save A. F. of L.

By Ralph West Robey.

There must be some reason for the completeness with which the question of industrial unions has been kept out of the current automobile labor controversy. Not a word, so far as I know, has been said about them, or about the possibility of an industrial union being the most fitting and proper type of labor organization under the NIRA. Rather, the whole case has been presented as a problem of having either company unions or the American Federation of Labor.

By this I do not mean to imply that this particular question is not the immediate issue. Quite obviously it is. The controversy has arisen because of the desire of the American Federation of Labor to get automobile labor, not unionized in such a manner as will be best for labor, but to get it unionized in the way which will be most beneficial to the American Federation of Labor. This means breaking down the present company unions on the one hand and preventing an industrial union on the other hand.

Is Not Complete Problem From Labor's Viewpoint.

To most impartial observers, however, I think it will be evident that this is not the complete problem from the point of view of labor. Their concern is, and must be, how best to protect themselves, not how to forward the interests of William Green. It should be a choice, accordingly, not only between company unions and the A. F. of L., but a choice between company unions, the A. F. of L. and an industrial union. Of these the first two represent the extremes, the latter the type of organization that most nearly parallels the organization of employers created under the NIRA.

The company union gives labor only the possibility of speaking as one establishment. In the days of forced competition there was a considerable argument in its favor. Under those circumstances each employer presumably was competing as a unit. His wage scale and his price level were matters of his own determination except as modified by competitive conditions. There was good theoretical reason, therefore, for the workers of such an employer looking upon their problems as a company affair—to be settled on this unit basis.

Argument for Company Unions Now Weakened.

With the independence of employers ended as a matter of policy by the Government, this argument for company unions largely has disappeared. Under the NIRA the question of wages and prices no longer is a matter of determination by the individual employer. Rather, it is a question of the industry as a whole. It is logical, therefore, for labor to be in a position to speak as an industry. In other words, the industrial, or vertical, union is the organization counterpart of the cooperation among employers under NIRA.

For the American Federation of Labor to try to step in under such circumstances simply is incongruous. Its set-up does not fit present conditions. In fact, it has not fitted American labor conditions for a long time. To no small extent this is the reason it is so insignificant from the point of view of numbers. Also to no small extent this is the reason labor has fared so badly relatively under the drawing up of codes. Through permitting the A. F. of L. to be its principal spokesman under the NRA, labor has lost the greatest opportunity it has ever had to put itself in a dominant position. If automobile labor swings to the A. F. of L. now, it may save that organization, but it will not be helping itself.

Wool Market.

Boston, March 22 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—The wool market in Boston was very quiet. There was not enough business transacted to establish a market. Nominally, quotations were unchanged from last week. Some houses were willing to make slight concessions from recent asking prices on odd lots and inferior wools. Most holders of substantial quantities of good wool were inclined to wait for a demand to develop, meanwhile firmly adhering to asking prices.

Goods Markets.

New York, March 22 (A.P.).—Print cloths eased another ⅛ cent to 6¼ cents for 38½-inch 64x60s today, with sales trifling. Finished lines were quiet. Rayon taffetas were well sold ahead, according to reports from the Rayon Weavers' Association. Wool goods were bought in small lots for spot use whenever light colors were available. Silk prints were in steady demand. Burlaps held unchanged.

U. S. Smelting Declares $1 Extra Dividend

Continental Oil and Units Report Combined Profit of $2,275,860.

New York, March 22 (AP).—Directors of U. S. Smelting and Refining and Mining Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1 and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock. Both are payable April 14 to stock of record April 2. Three months ago an extra dividend of $3.50 was paid.

The annual report of the company showed net profit in 1933 of $5,169,875 after fixed charges equal to $6.88 a common share after provision for preferred dividends. This compared with net profit in 1932 of $1,995,232 or 62 cents a common share.

Net profit for the first two months of 1934 amounted to $897,238 after charges, equal, after preferred dividend requirements to $1.18 a share on common, compared with profit of $278,245 or 1 cent a share in the first two months of 1933.

Continental Oil Co. and subsidiaries had consolidated 1933 profit of $2,275,860, equivalent to 48 cents a share on the capital stock. This included nonrecurring profit of $1,403,168 from sale of property and other adjustments. In 1932 the company had a net loss of $1,444,133. December 31 current assets of $35,408,098 included $12,024,648 cash and United States Government securities. Current liabilities were $5,780,098. At the end of 1932 cash on hand was $9,153,321.

Chicago, March 22 (AP).—Net income of the Great Lakes Power Co. for 1933 was $386, compared with $21,182 in 1932. The company serves nine communities in the Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, neighborhood. Operating revenues were $682,856, a drop of $40,016, but in the last two months of the year conditions improved considerably and the company has recently been enjoying a greater volume of business.

Curb Turns Firmer Under Active Buying

New York, March 22 (AP).—Firmer prices prevailed at the close of the Curb Market today. Moderately active buying in the final dealings advanced a number of utilities, oils and specialties fractions to around a point.

Natomas Co., which is being split up on a 10 for 1 basis, provided fireworks with a rise of more than 7 points. The stock, traded on a when issued basis, improved sectionally.

Aluminum Co. of America closed 3¾ points higher on a moderate turnover. Issues finishing around a point up included Bliss Corporation, American Gas & Electric, Dow Chemical, Electric Bond & Share, Gulf and Humble oils, Hiram Walker, Lake Shore and Sherwin Williams. Wright Hargreaves gained a small fraction in an active transfer, but Fisk Rubber showed a similar recession.

Sales approximated 232,000 shares, compared with 253,000 for Wednesday.

U. S. Buys Less Tung Oil From China in January

Exports of tung oil to the United States from Hankow during January totaled 3,364,000 pounds compared with 8,034,000 pounds for December, 1933, and 6,584,000 pounds for January, 1932, according to C. C. Concannon, chief, Chemical Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Total exports of oil for the month from Hankow likewise declined to 4,768,000 pounds from 10,276,000 pounds in the preceding month and 9,504,000 pounds for the corresponding month of 1933.

Stocks—Some cheer came into the stock market and prices advanced 1.5 points in a quiet rally. Motors, metals and steel advanced. Numerous rails were up. Sales volume fell off to 1,054,250 shares.

Bonds—Mildly mixed trends ruled a listless market and bonds sagged one-tenth of a point. Traders preferred sidelines while waiting for labor settlements. Sales volume increased to $12,290,000.

Curb—Firmer prices prevailed at closing. Moderately active buying advanced a number of utilities, and specialties. Sales volume dropped to 232,000 shares.

Wheat—Likelihood of settling the automobile labor dispute gave wheat an upward push and the market closed unchanged to one-quarter cent higher. Other grains were up. May sold at 87¼, July at 87⅜.

Cotton—Early rallies were lost in late trading under liquidation. Labor uncertainties checked buying. March sold at 11.82. The general market declined 1 to 8 points. May closed at 11.89.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed barely steady, 5 to 14 points higher. March sold at 10.85; May, at 11.00.

Sugar—Raw suger declined another 2 points to the basis of 2.95; refined was unchanged at 4.50.

Gold—Bar gold sold in the U. S. at $35 per ounce. It sold in London at 136 shillings and 2 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.11⅛ to the English pound; 6.60½ cents to the French franc, and 39.85 cents to the German mark.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Although business on the stock exchange was restricted today by settlement details, the tone of the market was cheerful. Motor and aircraft shares were the firmest sections, while foreign bonds and silt-edged securities held steady. Gold mining and oil shares were weaker, the latter on the reduction in the petroleum price. Transatlantic issues were undecided, and the market closed quiet.

Paris—Unfavorable advices from other markets weakened prices on the bourse. Oil and rubber shares especially declined, owing to reports of a cut in the price of gasoline in England and dissension among rubber producers. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Interest of buyers was concentrated in the bond section of the boerse. Stocks declined further and closed weak.

Nominal Rise Is Recorded in Trade Failures

New York, March 22.—A nominal rise occurred in the number of business failures for the week ended March 8. The total in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was 260, compared with 253 and 255, respectively, in the two weeks immediately preceding. Contrasted with the total of 494 last year, the current week's figures declined 47.4 per cent.

More failures occurred in the latest report in the East, the South and for the Pacific Coast sections, but there was a drop of 11 in the Western region, as compared with the total a week earlier. Failures with liabilities of $5,000 and over in each case numbered 160 this week, against 165 last week and 357 a year ago.

Sugar Corn Price Is Up in Maryland

Frederick, Md., March 22 (Spl.).—Sugar corn canners with factories in this city, Mount Airy, Walkersville, Adamston and Woodsboro announced yesterday, following a conference, that they will pay $10 per ton for corn delivered at the factories this season, an advance of $1.60 per ton over last year's price of $8.40 per ton.

Last year's contract price set at the beginning of the season was $7 per ton, but at the end of the season, due to the NRA price increase, $8.40 was paid.

On account of the low price the average acreage, about 9,000, was very much reduced, farmers declaring that they could not cultivate sugar corn for $7 per ton. A normal season at the factories lasts from five to six months during which a large number of persons are given employment. Frederick County is one of the largest sugar-corn canning counties in the State.

U. S. Imports Of Gold Total $30,414,000

New York, March 22.—During the week ending March 21 imports of gold at port of New York amounted to $30,414,000, of which $20,182,000 came from England; $3,117,000 from India, $2,489,000 from Mexico, $1,006,000 from France, $246,000 from Holland, $74,000 from Switzerland, and $7,000 from Cuba.

There were no exports but there was a net loss to the monetary gold stocks by a net increase of $2,139,000 in stock of gold held under earmark of foreign account. The Federal Reserve Bank also reported the receipt during the week of $7,232,000 in gold from France, representing gold which had been previously acquired and included in the monetary gold stocks of the U. S.

100,000 Tons of Coal Shipped at Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—More than 100,000 tons of coal was shipped from Norfolk and Newport News yesterday to New York and New England. It went in barges and steamers.

Five tugs, each towing three coal laden barges passed out to sea within three hours. They were bound for New York, Boston, Providence, New Bedford and New Haven. Eight steamers each carrying from 4,000 to 7,000 tons sailed before nightfall.

At the Norfolk and Western piers at Norfolk and the Chesapeake & Ohio piers at Newport News it was stated tha coal shipments so far this month have been heavier than for the same period in several years.

Wheat Values Mount Fraction In Late Trading

Likelihood of Labor Peace Aids Upturn; Other Grains Rise.

Chicago, March 22 (AP).—Upturns of more than a cent a bushel late today from earlier low levels for wheat accompanied talk of possible quick adjustment of the automobile industrial crisis.

A stimulus to wheat price rallies was also found in Washington announcement that the Senate Finance Committee had adopted an Agricultural Department recommendation to reduce from 5 cents to 1 cent per $100 value the tax on commodity exchange transfers of produce.

Reports of widespread need of soaking rains over the wheat belt, especially spring crop sections both north and south of the Canadian line, were also given attention.

Top Prices Reduced.

Top quotations on wheat, however, failed to hold, and the close was unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼ cent higher; corn, ⅛ off to ¼ up; oats, unchanged to ⅛ advance, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents decline.

Moving parallel with prices of securities, the wheat market showed an early downward trend that was associated with uncertainty about labor difficulties and with some moisture relief West and Southwest.

Part of the weakness of wheat values at this stage appeared to come, too, from an unofficial survey of domestic winter wheat prospects indicating a crop of 500,000,000 bushels, against 351,000,000 in 1933. The survey suggested a crop condition of 75.3, compared with 59.4 a year ago and 75.8 in 1932.

Plenty of Wheat Offered.

Plenty of wheat was for sale later when prices scored advances. Bears emphasized that according to today's unofficial summaries all the principal States in the domestic winter wheat belt showed a better crop condition than at this time last year.

Kansas and Nebraska figures today both indicated a condition of 80, whereas on April 1, 1933, Kansas reported 37 and Nebraska 59.

Corn and oats were steadied by the fact that rural offerings of corn to arrive lacked volume. Transatlantic advices continued to suggest inadequacy of corn supplies abroad.

Provisions sympathized with hog market downturns.

Wholesalers In Fifth District Increase Gains

Richmond, Va., March 22 (AP). Wholesale trade in five big lines leaped upward in February in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, the Richmond Reserve Bank said today in a monthly summary. All five lines showed substantial improvement for the first two months of 1934, as compared with the same period last year.

The increases, compared with last year in February, were: Drugs, 23.5 per cent; groceries, 37.3 per cent; hardware, 59.7 per cent; shoes, 60.5 per cent, and dry goods, 87.5 per cent.

For the two months the increases were: Drugs, 17.9 per cent; groceries, 30.6 per cent; shoes, 63.9 per cent; hardware, 68.7 per cent, and dry goods, 88.7 per cent.

Four lines reporting on stocks on their shelves at the end of February all showed gains. Their percentages were: Shoes, 13.5 per cent; hardware, 18.4 per cent; groceries, 18.6 per cent, and dry goods, 87.5 per cent.

The wholesale gains are keeping abreast of the improvement noted from month to month in retail trade in the Fifth Federal Reserve District.

Philippine Import Trade Drops in '33

Lowest Level Recorded Since 1917; Exports Gain 11 Per Cent.

While the import trade of the Philippines for 1933 declined to the lowest level recorded since 1917, exports from the Islands increased 11 per cent, compared with 1932, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner E. H. Hester, Manila.

Total imports into the Philippine Islands during the calendar year 1933 were valued at 149,472,000 pesos, while exports amounted to 211,542,000 pesos. The favorable balance of trade, totaling 62,070,000 pesos, was twice that of 1932 and the largest since 1927.

The decline in import trade, Hester points out, was more generally due to lower price levels than to decreases in volume, although demand for certain commodities was restricted by the reduced purchasing power of consumers. Import items which, largely for this reason, declined 10 per cent or more, were cotton piece goods, automobiles, parts and accessories, paper and wood manufacturers.

Commodities Hold Steady; Gains in Lead

New York, March 22.—Some hesitancy and irregularity was noted in commodity markets during the past week, although prices, as a whole, continued fairly stable, especially in spot markets.

The firmness in cash markets was reflected in a slight rise in the Daily Weighted Price Index of 30 basic commodities from 109.51 on March 5 to 110.24 on March 12.

Advances again exceeded declines in the regular weekly tabulation of wholesale prices, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., but the excess was not as great as in the preceding week or the preceding year. In the latest period, advances totaled 28 and declines 23, whereas in the preceding week and preceding year they were, respectively, 45, and 24, and 56 and 7.

Food Group Irregular.

Irregular movements predominated in the foodstuffs group with advances and declines numbering 13 each.

Coffee futures reached new high levels, but profit taking and liquidation brought net losses for the week. In the spot markets, both Santos No. 4 and Rio No. 7 showed moderate increases over the week before, with demand good, particularly for the account of chain stores and large wholesalers.

Fresh butter prices advanced to new high levels, but eased off considerably when demand subsided and heavy receipts caused some accumulation of supplies. Quotations for nearby white eggs were unchanged, with supplies showing some tendency to accumulate. Fresh mixed colored varieties advanced ½ cent to 17¼ cents per dozen, about the same position as a year ago. Improvement in demand is looked for before the end of the month.

Live Stock Receipts Light.

Receipts of live stock at leading markets were considerably lighter than the previous week, except in the case of calves. Lambs declined 35 cents from a week ago, and sheep were unchanged, but hogs were 10 cents and steers 50 cents higher.

A very mixed situation in all livestock markets prevailed throughout the week. Slaughtering of cattle and calves during February showed fair gains over the like month of a year ago, while the number of hogs, sheep and lambs slaughtered declined.

A further large drop in visible wheat supplies helped to strengthen the market for that grain as did developments of an inflationary nature at Washington, resulting in a net gain of 1¾ cents per bushel for cash wheat at New York. Other grains benefited with wheat, but the net change for the coarser grains for the week was slightly downward. Crop news from the Southwest indicated additional moisture with mild and very seasonable weather. Flour prices increased 5 cents per barrel for most grades, following the firmer wheat prices. Trading volume, however, remained very limited.

300 Frederick Women Attend Club Meeting

Dr. T. B. Symons Speaker; Chairmen Present Year's Reports.

Frederick, Md., March 22 (Spl.).—More than 300 women of Frederick County attended the annual meeting of the Federation of Rural Women's Clubs here today. A celebration of the Maryland tercentenary was given in the form of tableaux.

Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of extension service, University of Maryland, was the principal speaker.

Reports were made by the following: Mrs. H. C. Erdman, Burkittsville, chairman of the auditing committee; Mrs. William E. Kindley, treasurer; Mrs. G. C. Ball, Jamesville, education; Mrs. Edgar Davis, Pleasant Grove, American citizenship and legislation; Miss Maxine Browning, Kemptown, civics; Mrs. John Hoffman, Middletown, American home; Mrs. Austin E. Rhoads, fine arts; Mrs. Guy Baker, Unionville, public welfare; Mrs. Daniel J. Thomas, Jug Bridge, Frederick Fair; Mrs. C. E. Nichols, Buckeyestown, publicity, and Mrs. George Chick, Merryland Tract, recreation.

Miss Helen Pearson, home demonstration agent, reviewed the work of the federation, which embraces 26 clubs, with a membership of more than 700.

Staunton Airport Tracts Purchased

Staunton, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Transfer of five tracts, aggregating 114.78 acres and involving $16,874.50, has been recorded here.

Staunton acquired the land for a municipal airport at Verona, 4 miles north of here, on the Lee highway. Mayor George A. Cottrell has given the sellers checks for their lands, and today threescore CWA employes started grading the field.

Those receiving land compensation were Flossie V. Sutton and husband, 6 acres, &c., $3,250; Flora B. Whitmore, 40.68 acres, $5,085; G. G. Dunsmore and wife, 37 acres, &c., $4,265; Nannie B. Stephenson and husband, 19.11 acres, &c., $2,388.75; H. B. Stephenson and wife, 11.99 acres, &c., $1,498.75.

Fredericksburg Cast May Enter Play Meet

Fredericksburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—"The Lost Lenore," by Dr. Beverley Randolph Tucker, of Richmond, may be staged by local high school students in the annual drama contest for Virginia high schools, at the University of Virginia, May 11 and 12.

Dr. Tucker's play, when presented for the first time by students here, was warmly received.

4 Petersburg Men Put on Code Body

Southside Virginia Food Wholesalers Organized.

Petersburg, Va., March 22 Spl.). Harvey Barker, P. H. Booth, Paul Roper and J. B. Stallings, all of here, were chosen members of the wholesale and retail code authority for Southside Virginia at the meeting of the Southside Food and Grocery Distributors here.

Mr. Barker represents the independent retailer; Mr. Booth, the independent wholesaler; Mr. Roper, the wholesale-owned voluntary group, and Mr. Stallings, the chain store.

M. B. Staples, jr., chairman of the State code authority, addressed the meeting.

Oldest Berkeley School Described

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—The first school in Berkeley County, established in 1866 or 1867, was described to the Berkeley County Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy last night by Mrs. Andrew Zepp, this city, one of the pupils.

This first school was (and still is) known as Stokes' School, Josiah Stokes having donated the land. Its pupils ranged from 6 to 21 years, some never having attended school before.

Miss Arabel Miller was the teacher, making her home with a brother, Henry B. Miller, who later became the law partner of Ward Lamon and Mr. Lucas here.

Fredericksburg Liquor Store Jobs Lure Many

Fredericksburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Many persons from here and nearby counties are applying for jobs in the State liquor store presumably to be established here. The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has not yet determined the location of the dispensary, how many will be employed, or any other details of operation.

Farmers, salesmen, merchants, engineers and numerous other occupations are represented among the applicants.

Fredericksburg Area Laymen Meet Tuesday

Fredericksburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—A meeting and banquet of the Episcopal Laymen's Association of this district will be held Tuesday. Dr. M. M. Lewis is president.

Representatives of all Episcopal churches in this area will attend.

Peery Signs Bill On Salary Liens

Dairy Control Measure Hearing Today.

Richmond, March 22 (AP).—Gov. George C. Peery today signed the Hill Montague measure requiring notice of liens against property or salary of debtors be served by officers authorized to serve by civil process rather than by informal notice.

Hearing on the milk control bill, which will establish a milk board with wide powers over Virginia's dairy industry, is set for tomorrow. The Governor will hear opinions on the bill, which has attracted wide interest.

The Chief executive said he had taken no action in connection with the De Jarnette hospital bill. He advised both those favoring and those opposing signing of the bill that they might submit further evidence in the form of briefs this week.

Augusta Judge Choice Waits

Three Mentioned for Trial Post, But None Has Applied.

Staunton, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Judge Joseph A. Glasgow has indicated he will not be in a hurry to name a trial justice for Augusta County.

The city and county Democratic committees and the bar association decline to make a recommendation as to the appointee.

Selecting a trial justice, fixing his salary, and designating the places where he shall hold court in the county are left to the judge of circuit court. It is known that Judge Glasgow is not in a receptive mood for suggestions, desiring to decide the matters himself.

The names of two young attorneys and an engineer have been mentioned, but none has filed an application.

The trial justice will supplant the 18 justices of the peace now serving the six magisterial districts—three in each area—so far as the hearing of cases and fixing of penalties are concerned. The only duty of the justices after July 1 will be to issue warrants.

Danville Hospital Sets Weekly Rate

City-Owned Sanatorium to Make Patients Pay.

Danville, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—The directors of Hilltop Sanatorium, city-owned institution for treatment of tuberculosis, have set a minimum weekly rate.

Henceforth every patient will be required to pay $2 a week. During the past five years only three patients have contributed anything for service. There are now 35 patients, with room for 50.

Improvements include an addition to the sanitation equipment, which will cost $9,390.

Virginia Health Funds Down $40,000 Per Year

Richmond, March 22 (AP).—Dr. Warren F. Draper, State Health Commissioner, last night said money available for public health work in Virginia had been cut $40,000 per year.

The Rockefeller Foundation has withdrawn $10,000 annually while the United States Public Health Service and the Commonwealth Fund of New York have cut their former contributions by $30,000.

Luray Services Held For Mrs. Compton

Luray, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Funeral services were held here yesterday for Mrs. Mattie Compton, 86, who died in Front Royal Sunday.

She was a direct descendant of Peter Stover, Shenandoah Valley pioneer, who founded Strasburg, Shenandoah County, nearly 200 years ago.

State Insurance Agents To Convene in Staunton

Staunton, Va., March 22 (Spl.). The executive committee of the Virginia Association of Insurance Agents has accepted the invitation of the Staunton Association of Fire Insurance Agents to hold its annual convention in Staunton about the middle of June.

About 200 agents are expected.

J. H. Clardy Buried.

Bristol, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Funeral services for Jewett H. Clardy, 67, business man who died Tuesday at his home, were conducted from the residence today, interment following in Glenwood Cemetery near Bristol.

Dr. C. F. Steck Resigns Pulpit

Waynesboro Congregation Accepts Withdrawal of Lutheran Pastor.

Waynesboro, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Dr. Charles F. Steck, pastor of the Grace Lutheran Church here for 12 years, has tendered his resignation to become effective April 29. The resignation was accepted, terminating the longest pastorate ever held by a minister of that church.

Dr. Steck was ordained in October, 1888, at Louisville, Ky. He came to Waynesboro in 1922 from Washington, where he had organized Epiphany Church, and succeeded the Rev. E. L. Ritchie here.

Dr. Steck is a past president of the Rotary Club, and is president of the Welfare Alliance. Under his leadership the membership of Grace Church increased steadily. He has two sons, also Lutheran ministers.

Dr. Steck will retire and live with his daughter, Mrs. Camden Coyner, near Waynesboro.

Lee County Sends Ten To State Penitentiary

St. Charles, Va., March 22 (AP). There will be no crime wave in Lee County if circuit court officials and jurymen can help it. Looking back on their record for the court term just ended, they found today that ten men, tried during the recent session, are now doing time in the Virginia State Penitentiary at Richmond.

Marshal L. Giles, jailer, found that his late charges are starting terms of from 18 to 45 years. Edward Veale and Bill Lynn, confessed robbers of the Ewing Bank, head the list.

How to Avoid War Topic for Contest

Culpeper League Invites Essays by Pupils.

Culpeper, Va., March 22 (Spl.). The Culpeper County Community League, headed by Mrs. G. William Cox, has opened an essay contest on the subject: "What Can We Do to Keep Us Out of War?"

The contest, supervised by teachers of all high schools in the county, is open to students from the sixth grade up. The winning essay will be read at the district conference in Fredericksburg April 12.

Contest judges are T. W. Hendricks, superintendent of schools; Mrs. Berkeley G. Calfee and G. William Mitchell.

3 Take First Degree In Winchester Lodge

Winchester, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Madison Lodge No. 6, I. O. O. F. entertained the degree team of Tuscarora Lodge No. 29, of Martinsburg, W. Va., which conferred the first degree on a class of three.

Next Monday the local lodge will be host to the degree team of the Front Royal lodge, which will confer the second degree.

Orchardists May Apply For Compensation Plan

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Orchardists wishing the protection of State compensation commission for the employes they hire may apply now, at the rate of $2 per month per $100 of pay roll, advises Peyton R. Harrison, jr., secretary to State Compensation Commissioner George T. Watson.

William Ashby Rodgers, 73, Dies in Winchester

Winchester, Va., March 22 (Spl.). William Ashby Rodgers, 73, died yesterday at the hospital, where he had a minor operation Sunday.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. J. Ray Everhart, with whom he lived, and Miss Nellie Rodgers, both of here. Funeral services will be tomorrow.

Gretna Gets PWA Loan For New Water Works

Gretna, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—The Public Works Administration has approved an application by this town for a $50,000 loan to install a municipal water system.

Work is expected to begin in a few weeks.

Augusta County Tax Delinquencies Listed

Staunton, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Under the supervision of Dr. William H. Stauffer, State tax economist, nine employes are working in the Augusta County clerk's office on a study and compilation of farm transfers and tax delinquencies.

This is one of 25 counties in Virginia in which similar work will be done. The project is financed with Federal funds.

Dilback-Fire Loss Placed at $10,000

Shenandoah County Home Razed by Flames.

Harrisburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.). Fire of unknown origin today destroyed the large dwelling of Mrs. Annie Golladay at Dilback, in Powell's Fort Valley, Shenandoah County.

The blaze was first discovered in an unoccupied room. Fire companies from Woodstock and Strasburg arrived in time to save the adjoining property.

The loss is $10,000. The house was formerly the home of C. M. Golladay, Dilback postmaster.

Virginia D.A.R. To Plant Trees

Roanoke, Va., March 22 (AP).—Daughters of the American Revolution, attending the thirty-eighth State conference here, were entertained at a tea at historic Fort Lewis, near Salem, yesterday by the Fort Lewis Chapter.

Speakers last night were Mrs. Sidney Perry Cooper, of Hendersson, N. C., State regent of North Carolina, and Mrs. William N. Reynolds, of Winston-Salem, N. C., past president general and honorary State regent.

Miss Claudine Hutter told the conference that a tree planting ceremony will be held in Anacostia Park, Washington, at the close of the Continental Congress in April, and requested chapters to contribute "to this living hall of fame." The trees will come from grounds associated with famous men or women and "great events in American history."

Trees from Monticello, Mount Vernon, Yorktown and Ferry Farm have been offered, Miss Hutter said.

Mrs. Edmonia Veech, 77, Buried in Spotsylvania

Fredericksburg, Va., March 22 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Edmonia Veech, 77, who died in a Richmond hospital, were held today from Wilderness Chapel, in Spotsylvania County.

Mrs. Veech is survived by a son, Leo Dempsey, of Baltimore, and the following daughter: Mrs. Louis Plowman and Mrs. Pearl Talley, of Washington; Mrs. Irene Davis, of Remington; Mrs. L. B. Chewning and Mrs. L. R. Davenport, of Wilderness; Mrs. Lizzie Haynie, of near Fredericksburg; Mrs. Calley Webb, of Richmond; Mrs. Edmonia Bryant, of Rowhatan County, and Mrs. David Brame, of St. Louis.

LEGAL NOTICES

CERTIFICATE—WE, THE UNDERSIGNED, being respectively the president and secretary of The Draper Beverage Company, hereby certify that the following is an exact copy of a resolution unanimously adopted by the board of trustees of the Draper Beverage Company, held in the offices of the company on the 9th day of March, 1934, at 2 o'clock p. m.: "Resolved, that the board of trustees deem it advisable to change the name of the corporation to Pickwick Liquor Shop, and in order that this may be duly accomplished hereby direct the president to call a special meeting of the stockholders of the corporation to be held on Tuesday, March 13, 1934, at 9 o'clock a. m., in the offices of the corporation, 1001 Connecticut avenue northwest, for the purpose of considering a proposal to change the name of the corporation." We further certify that the following is a true and exact copy of a resolution unanimously adopted at a special meeting of the stockholders of said corporation, all of the stockholders being present and voting, and the entire board of trustees being present and voting, held on the 13th day of March, 1934, at 9 o'clock a. m. in the offices of the corporation, 1001 Connecticut avenue northwest: "Resolved, that the name of The Draper Beverage Company be changed to Pickwick Liquor Shop." It was further resolved that a certificate of the foregoing resolution, signed by the president and by the secretary of the corporation under the corporate seal, and acknowledged as in the case of deeds of real estate, be filed with the recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia and that a certified copy of said certificate be filed by the secretary of the corporation with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board for the District of Columbia, immediately." "And it was further resolved that Joseph FitzGerald, jr., be and he hereby is constituted and appointed attorney in fact for The Draper Beverage Company, to execute, acknowledge and deliver the certificate for the change of the corporate name from The Draper Beverage Company to Pickwick Liquor Shop." In witness whereof, the said The Draper Beverage Company, a corporation, has caused these presents to be signed with its corporate name by Joseph FitzGerald, jr., its president, attested by Lew B. Mohler, its secretary, and its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed this 13th day of March, 1934, and does hereby constitute and appoint Joseph FitzGerald, jr., its true and lawful attorney in fact for it and in its name to acknowledge and deliver the foregoing as and for its act and deed, and the said Joseph FitzGerald, jr., has hereunto set his hand and seal this 13th day of March, 1934.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Threats — By Harry J. Tuthill

LIKE I SAY, MR. BUNGLE, WE COME TO SEE YOU VERY PRIVATE. KO NGA MEA KATOE.
TENA KAI. YES, ABOUT THE BOY.
THE BOY, EH? WELL WHAT ABOUT HIM?
I AM HIS FADER. HIS PAPA. THIS MAN IS HIS UNCLE.
AN' WE ARE VERY LONESOME FOR THE BOY.
FATHER! YOU?
OH I GUESS THEY'RE WILLING TO PROVE THAT, GEORGE.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 3-23.
YES, THAT'S A GOOD IDEA. HOW CAN YOU PROVE..?
TENA HONORO E PAI KOE!
HEY! WE TIRED OF ALL THIS FOOLISH QUESTION. YOU GIVE US THE BOY OR....
EASY KID, NO ROUGH STUFF HERE OR ELSE...
NICE BOYS. DID YOU SEE HIM PUT THAT BIG KNIFE BACK INTO HIS POCKET WHEN I PRESSED MY THUMB INTO HIS BACK?
I SAW THE KNIFE.
HEY FELLOW, YOU MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS. NEXT TIME WE TALK TO MR. BUNGLE PRIVATE. YOU HEAR ME?

DIXIE DUGAN — She's Working! — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

Y' KNOW, MR. JEPPWORTH— IF I WASN'T SUCH AN HONEST PERSON I WOULDN'T SAY IT— —BUT DANCIN' WITH YOU IS LIKE A DREAM COME TRUE—
MY GOODNESS — HOW?
WHEN I FIRST SAW YOU I KNEW IN A MINUTE YOU WERE DIFFERENT FROM TH' KIND OF MEN I USUALLY MEET IN MY JOB—AN' I GOT T' HOPIN'—SILLY LIKE—THAT YOU'D WALK INTO TH' WELDENRITZ, BARBER SHOP— OVER T' MY TABLE— THIRD. ON TH' RIGHT-AND-AND-
-WELL, HERE I AM. NOW, DANCIN' WITH YOU.' GEE — I'M HAPPY! —AN' I'M HAPPY, TOO, THAT DIXIE'S GOT YOU FOR A BOY FRIEND —BECAUSE SHE'S SUCH A SWELL GIRL — ISN'T SHE?
YOU BET
OH, DEAR— IT'S JUST MY LUCK, WHEN I MEET A SWELL FELLOW LIKE YOU, T' HAVE YOU INTERESTED IN A SWELL GIRL LIKE DIXIE, WHERE POOR LITTLE ME WOULDN'T STAND A CHANCE—

THE GUMPS — Not So Good

NEVER MIND THOSE GRIPS- TAKE OFF YOUR HAT AND COAT- UNPACK THE STUFF-
WHAT DO YOU MEAN? YOU'VE GOT THE STEAMSHIP TICKETS- HAVEN'T YOU? OUR BOAT LEAVES IN A FEW HOURS- WE'VE GOT THE KID AND WE'VE GOT THE PAPERS- WHAT MORE DO WE NEED?
I TELL YOU WE CAN'T GO- WE DON'T DARE LEAVE THIS AFTERNOON- THE POLICE ARE WATCHING EVERY BOAT AND TRAIN IN TOWN- BIM GUMP REWARD SIGNS ON EVERY STREET CORNER- THE KID WOULD BE RECOGNIZED INSIDE OF FIVE MINUTES-
NO!
THE POLICE ARE HOT ON OUR TRAIL- WE'VE GOT TO GET OUT OF HERE AND GET INTO HIDING WITH THE KID- OR WE'LL LOSE HER FOR GOOD- AS SOON AS DARKNESS COMES- WE'LL SLIP OUT- I HAVE A HIDE-AWAY THEY'LL NEVER FIND-

DICK TRACY — A Revelation?

CORNERED IN THE PRESS ROOM.. AND WITH NO BETTER WEAPON THAN A JAMMED GUN, THE TWO GANGSTERS SURRENDER.
THAT'S IT.. COME ON OUT AND KEEP THOSE HANDS UP
HOLD MY GUN; AND MY COAT, MR. PAGE. I WANT TO PAY BACK A COUPLE OF DEBTS.
EXIT
I JUST WANTED TO RETURN THOSE TWO JAWBREAKERS YOU BOYS GAVE ME WITH THAT TELEPHONE UP IN THE OFFICE! NOW GET UP!
IN THE OFFICE
BEFORE I CALL HEADQUARTERS I WANT TO THANK YOUR SCRUB WOMAN FOR COMING TO OUR AID WHEN THIS FIGHT FIRST STARTED
TRACY, I'M GOING TO REVEAL SOMETHING VERY STARTLING ABOUT THIS SCRUB WOMAN! YOU SEE SHE—
WHAT IS MATT PAGE'S REVELATION?

Walt Mason, Himself

Noel Le Joly.

Perhaps you do not know the name that heads this simple rhyme; the owner of it gathered fame back in the olden time. It seemed ordained that Noel's feet in humble paths would tread; but one fine day he left his beat, and punched a poet's head. And Villon was the bard inspired whose head received repair; he made the lusty Noel tired through some cheap love affair; for one brief moment Noel rose, by some high impulse led, distributing a swarm of blows he punched the poet's head. And then, in everlasting verse, poor Villon wrote him down, describing in his language, terse, the swats that jarred his crown. "As washerwomen beat their duds he beat me," Villon said, and Noel lives through fires and floods, for punching Villon's head. Now, scholars, eager, tireless souls, who ne'er forsake their cause, are pawing over musty scrolls to find who Noel was; they study records vague and dim, immured in prisons dread, and this is all they've learned of him—he punched poor Villon's head. Wherever Villon's name appears, the Noel name will run, and always will throughout the years until the world is done. No other man has gathered fame in such a way, 'tis said; today 'twould seem a scurvy game to punch a poet's head.

NOW, YOU CHEAP SAFE-CRACKER! NO DOUBLE-DEALING! WHERE IS THAT TREATY ??
TRYIN' TO GET OUT'A PAYIN' ME, HUH ? C'MON ACROSS WITH THAT FIVE GRAND, OR I'LL —
MAR. 23
MY COUNTRY, NURALGIA, WILL PAY WELL - BUT NOT BEFORE THEY GET THE TREATY!
I TELL YOU I KNOCKED TH' GENT IN TH' LIBRARY UNCONSCIOUS, BOUND AN' GAGGED HIM, STUFFED HIM IN A CLOSET AN' LOCKED HIM IN — OH - POOR LIEUTENANT SPENCER!! GOSH !!!
THEN I COPPED TH' TREATY OUT'A TH' SAFE, PUT IT UNDER TH' THIRD PALM AN' TIPPED YOU OFF ON TH' DANCE FLOOR!
THEN SOMEONE ELSE HEARD — AND BEAT ME TO IT!
SAY DOC, Y'DON'T S'POSE IT WAS THAT BLONDE Y'WAS DANCIN' WITH, DO YA?
BY GEORGE! IT WAS SHE !! LOOK - SHE'S DROPPED HER PROGRAM!

Tercentenary Fete Plans Announced

Hyattsville Meeting Will Prepare for Sunday.

Plans for the Maryland tercentenary celebration to be held Sunday at 3:30 p. m. in the Hyattsville National Guard Armory, sponsored by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Prince Georges County, will be completed tonight at 8 o'clock in the office of Dr. John Maloney, Hyattsville.

The meeting will be a joint session of the club's board of directors and special tercentenary committee. It also will be attended by the social committee, which is arranging for the club's spring dance at the Beaver Dam Country Club.

Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore, will be the principal speaker at the Maryland Day exercises. Music will be furnished by the University of Maryland Little Symphony Orchestra, directed by Prof. Louis B. Goodyear. Reading of the winning essay in a contest among seventh grade pupils of the county will be a feature. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Walter P. Plumley, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Mount Rainier.

Free Osteopathic Clinic Urged for Washington

Establishment of a free osteopathic clinic for Washington was proposed by the National Capital Osteopathic Society meeting yesterday at the Willard.

A committee was appointed to investigate the proposal. Dr. H. G. Brewer, of Newark, N. J., and Dr. W. B. Furr were speakers.

D. C. Highway Map Is Ready for Sale

Copies will be sold by the District to tourists. Great numbers of requests for them led to their preparation, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday.

Trade Group to Seek Harbor Development

Renewed efforts to obtain an appropriation of $1,625,000 in the rivers and harbors bill for development of the Washington harbor were pledged yesterday by the rivers and harbors committee of the Washington Board of Trade.
